GROUP IN HOUSE TO VOTE TODAY ON SAVING PLAN

To Approve Omnibus Bill or Put Issue Up to Whole Body.

HOOVER PLAN GAINS, BUT FIGHT IS LIKELY

Roop to Be Asked to Explain Difference in His and President's Figures.

The Democratic House economy committee will decide today whether to submit the whole issue of Federal salary cutting to the House tomorrow, or embrace savings from either a pay slash or staggered Government furloughs in an omnibus retrenchment bill.

Economy Chairman John McDuffie will ask the group to lay both the committee pay cut proposal and the President's five-day week, staggered furlough plan before the House tomorrow, as alternative riders to the legislative appropriations bill.

The committee is not expected to sustain him. It has yet to finish consideration of the President's blanket economy bill, sent to the House Friday, and probably will let the furlough and pay cut alternatives go over until the omnibus measure is ready for report later this week.

Economy Plan Rule.

If the committee today decides not to report separately its 11 per cent pay cut, with $1,000 exemption, as a rider to legislative appropriations, consideration of the latter measure may not be resumed tomorrow as planned. The appropriations committee may call up naval supplies instead.

The economy groupp has a rule to attach their pay cut plan to the legislative bill. If they decide to go ahead the vote must first be taken on the rule, which is broad enough to admit both salary cuts and the staggered furlough plan.

To propose the entire omnibus retrenchment project as a legislative appropriations rider, the committee would have to seek another rule from the House rules committee, Chairman McDuffie said.

Col. J. Clawson Roop, Director of the Budget, again will appear before the House economy committee when it resumes its sessions this morning.

Difference in Estimates.

He will be asked to explain differences between his own estimates of savings under the White House omnibus bill and President Hoover's figures.

Col. Roop told the committee $178,829,000 could be saved from the President's program. A White House memorandum issued the same day claimed from $225,000,000 to $250,000,000 in economies.

The divergence may be explained, it was said, through failure of the budget director to estimate savings under presidential reorganization of all Government bureaus, called for in the administration bill.

While the President's plan for staggered Government furloughs, on

Chicago 'Dried Up' For Conventions

Dry Agents Are Brought In and Much Liquor Is Seized in Raids.

Chicago, April 17 (A.P.).—Scores of raids on liquor resorts gave rise tonight to reports that Chicago is being "dried up" for the national political conventions in June.

No comment was forthcoming from the office of M. L. Harney, prohibition administrator for the Chicago district, who was transferred here recently from St. Paul. Harney has been in Washington, D. C., for several days.

Federal agents have been brought to Chicago recently from other Midwestern cities, and downtown speakeasies were reported operating more carefully than at any time in months. A drive by Federal agents on liquor resorts in Chicago and suburbs during the last ten days has resulted in the closing of several hundred of them. Thousands of gallons of liquors were seized in the raids and a long list of alleged liquor dealers are awaiting arraignment.

Pretender to Hungarian Throne Operated Upon

Brussels, Belgium, April 17 (A.P.).—The Archduke Otto of Hapsburg, pretender to the Hungarian throne, was operated on for appendicitis today at Steenockerzeel Castle, where he resides in exile.

A noted Vienna surgeon officiated and it was officially stated the operation had been completely successful.

Troops Seize Man in Mire After Killing

Waterboro, S. C., April 17 (A.P.).—Buster Tucker, one of two Negroes charged with slaying Henry Creech McMillan, white farmer, of Near Lodge, was captured today by national guardsmen in a swamp near the scene of the slaying. He was taken to Columbia and placed in the State Penitentiary for safe keeping.

The other alleged slayer, Booker T. Copeland, was believed tonight to be surrounded in another swamp two miles from where the farmer was attacked and fatally wounded yesterday. County officers branded as false a report that Copeland had been killed by a posse. Bloodhounds were used to trail the fugitive.

Sheriff L. C. Padgett, of Colleton County, was prepared to rush Copeland to the penitentiary also as a safeguard against possible violence. He said feeling in the county was running high. A coroner's jury today named the two Negroes, both Colleton County farm hands, as the slayers of McMillan.

SENATE BODY TODAY MAY REVEAL 'BEARS'

Whitney to Resume Testimony on Declines; Sensation Is Not Unlikely.

(United Press.)

Names of big-scale "bear" operators on the New York Stock Exchange, who President Hoover believes have been responsible for some of the price declines recently, may be revealed today by the Senate finance committee.

Richard Whitney, president of the exchange, will appear before the committee to resume his testimony, begun last week.

Whitney has submitted to the committee full details of selling operations—those known as "short" or bear selling, in which a speculator, believing that stock prices are going down, orders a broker to sell "short" stock which he does not own.

The tabulated statements submitted by Whitney, covering operations early this month when there were severe price declines in the stock market, include names of all stock issues in which there were "bear" interests of more than 10,000 shares April 8, and more important names of brokers and customers who were concerned in "bear" operations.

Promises of sensations, which have been made ever since the finance committee undertook its investiga-

Soviet Asks Recall Of Manchu Consul

Moscow Charges Abuse of Privilege in Sending of Mah's Notes.

Moscow, April 17 (A.P.).—Soviet Russia asked the Manchurian government today to recall its consul from Blagoveschensk, Siberia, on charges that he had abused the privilege of coded telegrams by sending to various parts of China and abroad appeals signed by Gen. Mah Chan-Shan, Manchurian minister of war. The request, issued by the foreign commissariat, said Gen. Mah was in refuge in Heilungkiang Province, of which he is governor.

(Reports from Harbin last week said that Gen. Mah had severed relations with the new Manchurian government and established military headquarters at Taheiho, across the Amur River from Blagoveschensk, in preparation for a campaign against the Japanese.)

41ST CONGRESS OF D. A. R. WILL OPEN TONIGHT

Curtis to Be Speaker at First Sessions; Many Delegates Arrive.

FESS ALSO LISTED TO MAKE ADDRESS

Preliminary Service Held at Cathedral Yesterday, With Beck Talking.

Attesting the fidelity of their organization to the religious faith of the founding fathers of the republic, the opening event of the forty-first Continental Congress of the D. A. R. was the George Washington Bicentennial commemorative service held at Washington Cathedral yesterday afternoon with a picturesque procession of the national officers and State regents of the society followed by a stirring patriotic address by Representative James M. Beck, of Pennsylvania.

The service was held in the Bethlehem Chapel, which was filled to overflowing an hour before the exercises were scheduled to begin, while an overflow congregation was accommodated in the Chapel of St. Joseph of Arimathea. Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, president general of the D. A. R., and her national officers wore their ribbons of high office. The State banners were borne in the procession by pages of the Continental Congress garbed in white.

The service was read by the Very Rev. G. C. F. Bratenahl, dean of Washington, assisted by other members of the cathedral staff of clergy, and the Rev. Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, canon of Washington, acted as master of ceremonies. Dean Bratenahl welcomed the national officers of the D. A. R. and the delegates in a brief address before he introduced Representative Beck.

Preservation of Home.

In his address Representative Beck urged the women of America as represented in the national organization of the D. A. R. to preserve and "rebuild" the American home as a sacred institution.

"With millions of Americans," Representative Beck declared, "the home remains only a name and not a reality. No one can be blind to the fact that no change in this feverish age is so startling or menacing as the slow destruction of this sacred institution. If the home remains, we need never despair of the future of the Republic. If it be destroyed—and it is in slow process of disintegration—the curtain will be rung down upon the great experiment of American democracy."

The hardships of pioneer women, such as Mary Ball Washington, mother of the First President, were recalled by the speaker and he de-

Extremists in Ireland Claim Rights to Rule

Dublin, April 17 (U.P.).—The Extremist Republicans of Ireland issued a challenge tonight to the right of President Eamon de Valera to head the Free State government.

The Extremists, members of the original Sein Fein movement, declared they alone were entitled to rule because "the government of the republic" was established by the Easter rebellion of 1916. The faction had been threatening to break with De Valera because of the moderation of his policies in recent years and, since he came into power, the agitation of the ultra-Republicans has been directed toward more violent opposition to Britain that he would lead.

Lindbergh Link Seen In Ocean Maneuvers

Coast Guard Cutter and Amphibian Plane Vanish After Mysterious Contact Off Massachusetts Coast; Strange Bag Found.

Toledo, Ohio, April 17 (A.P.).—A mysterious telephone call saying the kidnaped Lindbergh baby is now in Detroit and will be delivered to his parents within a week, was received late tonight by the editorial department of the Toledo Times.

Vineyard Haven, Mass., April 17 (U.P.).—Contact between an amphibian plane and the Coast Guard destroyer MacDougall off Menemsha Bight early today revived reports that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh or Lindbergh agents and the kidnapers of the Lindbergh baby had been in communication or were trying to reach each other in this vicinity.

The MacDougall and two picket boats waited at Menemsha Bight early this morning. All lights were doused at 1:35 a. m. when the roar of a plane's motor was heard. Immediately a red parachute flare was fired from the MacDougall. The plane landed alongside and after 30 minutes the MacDougall's lights were turned on and the destroyer headed out to sea.

Nothing was seen of the amphibian thereafter. It was not seen to take off and observers theorized it might have been taken aboard the destroyer or towed by it on the offshore side.

Late this afternoon a naval cruiser, resembling the Milwaukee, passed through Vineyard Sound headed across water in the direction of New York.

Two weeks ago today Col. Lindbergh and three men landed an amphibian on Cuttyhunk Island, near here. They said they were seeking a yacht Sallie or Nellie, but apparently their efforts to locate it failed.

A black traveling bag, found today in an isolated section of Marthas Vineyard by a trout fisherman and apparently dropped from an airplane, was turned over to State police, who regarded it as a probable clew to the kidnapers.

F. L. Bosworth, Tisbury resident, found the bag near Chilmark, on one of the wildest spots on the island. All marks which might lead to identification of its owner had been cut from the clothing the bag contained. It was apparently old, although no

BYRD'S PLATFORM IDEA GAINS GROUND

Plan for Committee to Meet Before Convention Submitted to Party.

(Associated Press.)

A provisional platform committee organized to meet four days in advance of the national convention to formulate tentative planks was proposed formally yesterday to members of the Democratic national committee.

"The idea," said an announcement by the national committee, "is to shape the time and avoid the confusion always present in the hasty preparation of the declaration of the party's principles incident to doing the work after the convention is assembled."

Former Gov. Harry F. Byrd of Virginia originated the plan, and it was approved by the convention arrangements committee two weeks ago.

Jouett Shouse, chairman of the national executive committee of the party, yesterday addressed the following letter to members of the national committee calling their attention to this action:

"Your committee believes that the best interests of the Democratic party can be conserved by having due time given to the important question of projecting a proper party platform.

"It is of course understood that the committee on platform and resolutions can not be authoritatively created until the convention meets; on the other hand, it has been the uniform practice of the conventions to confirm the individual members of such committees as recommended by the various State delegations. Ellsworth Plans Flight Over Antarctic Regions

New York, April 17 (A.P.).—Lincoln Ellsworth, who flew to the North Pole with Roald Amundsen, plans to lead an expedition to the Ross Sea in September, 1933, which would be climaxed by a flight over the great Antarctic continent.

In announcing the proposed expedition today, the American Geographical Society said more than three-quarters of this 5,000,000 square miles of land has never been seen by the eye of man. The flight, with Bernt Balchen at the controls, would extend from the Ross Sea to the Weddell Sea, on the opposite side of the Antarctic continent, and back again without landing, a distance of 2,900 miles.

LEAGUE UNIT DELAYS TRIP TO MANCHURIA

Opposition of New Regime to Visit by Koo Is Cause of Postponement.

Peiping, April 17 (A.P.).—The visit of the League of Nations commission to Manchuria will be delayed, it was understood today, until the new state of Manchoukuo makes its attitude clear on the presence there of Dr. Wellington Koo, the commission's Chinese assessor.

(Manchoukuo is the name of the Japanese-sponsored regime in Manchuria of Henry Pu-Yi, the former boy Emperor of China.)

The latest press reports from Manchuria said Manchoukuo officials were adamant in their stand that Dr. Koo will be arrested if he sets foot inside Manchurian territory.

The league commission has been just as firm on its insistence that Dr. Koo accompany the commission with full protection as scheduled.

(The Japanese government has said it will do its best to see that Dr. Koo is unmolested if he accompanies the commission, which is examining Sino-Japanese affairs, but stressed that they had no influence with the Manchoukuoan government.)

The commission has almost concluded its hearings on Manchurian affairs from Chang Hsiao-Liang, Manchurian war lord who controlled that section of China until the Japanese invasion of last September 18, his staff, and Japanese military officials and business men.

Testimony was taken on the customs, salt revenue, railways, army airplanes, politics and economics. The young Marshal Chang, son of the famous Chang Tso-Lin, we frequently heard by the commission and told how he and his wife had lost a fortune in jewels alone when the Japanese occupied his palace in Mukden.

Import Quota System Defended by Tardieu

Uiromagny, France, April 17 (A.P.).—Premier Andre Tardieu, speaking to his own constituency of Belfort, near the eastern border, today defended the quota system whereby imports into France are regulated, and which has been protested by American interests. The premier declared the system necessary in surmounting the present crisis.

"The hour has not yet returned for the policy of the open door," he said. "We must defend ourselves in order not to be submerged by massive low-priced imports which nearly dealt us a death blow."

KIDNAPERS FREE GIRL, 9, STOLEN IN WILMINGTON

Child Is Released After Priest Refuses to Ask for Ransom.

ABDUCTORS THOUGHT AFRAID OF CAPTURE

Victim Was Held Two Days in Philadelphia; Family Is Reticent.

Wilmington, Del., April 17 (A.P.).—A hysterical little girl was returned home safely late today after being held in Philadelphia two days by persons reported to have kidnaped her.

She was shoved to the sidewalk in front of a parish house in Philadelphia from an automobile which sped away. The priest, the Rev. Father Joseph Pugliese, turned her over to police who brought her home.

The girl, Hilda Brodsky, 9 years old, was brought back from Philadelphia by William Wilson, detective captain, of Wilmington. Her father, Harry Brodsky, dashed through a crowd of several hundred curious persons in front of his home, swept the sobbing girl into his arms and hurried back into the house.

A blue sedan which police said was used by the abductors was found abandoned in South Philadelphia tonight several hours after the girl was returned. Police declined to reveal how they identified it.

Although no direct word has come from the Brodsky home as to the details of Hilda's disappearance, authorities expressed certainty that she had been kidnaped for ransom. Father Pugliese said the abductors had asked him to present a demand for $50,000 ransom and an immunity pledge. This, he asserted, he refused to do.

Police said they had assurances from members of the Brodsky family and from Father Pugliese that no ransom was paid and expressed the belief the abductors gave up the child because they feared capture. Kidnaping carries a maximum penalty of death by hanging in Delaware.

Capt. Wilson said he had been unable to question the girl intensively because of her excited condition. He learned from her, however, that two men lured her into an automobile as she was one her way to school, three blocks from her home, Friday morning, telling her that her father wanted her and that they would take her to him.

Asked Priest to Be Contact.

They drove with her to Philadelphia, placed her in a house, and soon removed her to another house, where she was held until today. Capt. Wilson said the girl was able to describe the places, but he declined to make the information public.

Father Pugliese said a man and a woman previously had called upon him to request that he act as intermediary between them and the child's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brodsky, the priest said, to present a demand for $50,000 ransom and a promise of immunity.

When Father Pugliese declined to become connected with the case, he said, the two departed, but telephoned him a short time later threatening to kill the girl unless their demands were met. The priest notified police. Later the girl was freed at the parish house.

Graf Leaves Germany On Third Trip to Brazil

Friedrichshafen, Germany (Monday), April 18 (A.P.).—The dirigible Graf Zeppelin left at 12:08 a. m. today on its third trip this year to Pernambuco, Brazil, under the command of Dr. Hugo Eckener.

Temblor Kills Thousands in Chinese Area

Hankow, China, April 17 (A.P.).—Chinese reports trickling in from northeast Hupeh Province today said an earthquake on April 6 took a terrible toll, "several tens of thousands of persons perishing."

The dispatches said that the quake, which slightly jarred the Yangtze Valley, had affected scores of towns and villages in northeast Hupeh.

The reports, belated because of lack of communications in the interior, painted a picture of appalling conditions as the result of the quake.

"Human corpses and dead animals are strewn over the ground in the stricken area," the Chinese messages said.

The important walled town of Macheng was reported to have received the severest jarring, the walls of 70 per cent of the houses having crumbled on their inhabitants.

The dispatches concluded that the quakes had been "a terrible visitation upon the people who already have suffered untold plunderings from Communists and bandits."

Relief from the provincial government was requested.

BRIBERY IS CHARGED TO MAN AFTER RAID

Allegedly Mistook Deputy Marshal for Policeman and "Good Fellow."

After he allegedly offered $40 to a deputy United States marshal, whom he mistook for a Tenth Precinct policeman, Joseph Restifo, 32 years old, of 4403 Fourteenth street northwest, was arrested yesterday and charged with bribery.

His arrest on the bribery charge is a sequel to a raid on his apartment on Saturday night when thirteen men were charged with disorderly conduct.

Deputy United States Marshal Emory W. Clapper was standing in front of the Tenth Precinct Station yesterday when Restifo drove up in a taxicab. He alighted and walked toward Clapper, who was waiting for Deputy Marshal Harold T. Scott, who was in the station with a prisoner.

"Hello, ——!" is said to have greeted Clapper, mentioning the name of a policeman attached to the Tenth Precinct. "You were a pretty good fellow last night."

Just then Scott came from the station and Restifo asked Clapper, "Is he all right?" Clapper said he was. Then Restifo suggested that they take a ride, as he didn't want to be seen talking to them outside of the station.

The three drove around the corner

Coffee Fire Debris Yields Arson Clew

Gasoline-Soaked Bags Are Found by Officer in $15,000 Ruins.

Gasoline-soaked coffee bags were found yesterday by Sergt. Guy L. Jones, of the Silver Spring substation of the Montgomery County police, in the ruins of the fire which Saturday night swept the building of the Diplomat Coffee Co. on Georgia avenue just past the District line.

Other evidence that the fire, which caused $15,000 damage, was of incendiary origin, was found by Sergt. Jones, who discovered a 5-gallon can, which presumably had been used to carry the gasoline into the building. The gasoline-saturated bags were found in a storeroom on the second floor. The fire was checked before it reached the storeroom.

The interior of the building, which is used for the roasting of coffee and the storage of food products, was almost entirely destroyed by the fire.

PORTO RICANS RAID CAPITOL; STUDENT DIES

Many Injured in Protest Demonstration; Police Seize Leaders.

INDEPENDENCE FLAG IS CAUSE OF RIOTING

Mob of 1,000 Armed With Stones; Threats Precede Disturbance.

San Juan, Porto Rico, April 17 (A.P.).—A young high school student was killed and scores of persons were injured, several seriously, when hundreds of Nationalists rioted in protest against a design for Porto Rico's official flag at the new Capitol Building here early today.

The mob, variously estimated at 500 to 1,500 strong, armed with stones and fence pickets, swarmed into the building and up stairways to present a protest against the Senate's passage of a bill making the one-star independence banner the island's official flag, source of a long-standing controversy.

As police fought back, a section of the marble balustrade gave way in the crush, letting 20 or more persons fall 25 feet to a concrete basement, while the shattered marble fell on the others as they retreated.

Leaders Arrested.

Pedro Albizu Campos, president of the Nationalist party, and Jose Portilla, a former city assemblyman, were arrested on charges of inciting to riot. Warrants were prepared for the arrest of others.

The raid on the capitol was preceded by a Nationalist meeting in the principal plaza to observe the birthday anniversary of the late Jose de Diego, advocate of independence for Porto Rico and the creation of a Caribbean state through a league of Spanish-speaking islands.

Albizu Campos climaxed a speech with the announcement that he would lead the crowd to the capitol in protest against adoption of the independence emblem as the official flag. On the way the crowd armed itself with stones and palings from the fence around Casino Puerto Rico.

Investigation Ordered.

While the police battled with the mob, Capitol employes said, Albizu Campos attempted to enter the representatives' chamber, but was prevented by the grilled gates, which were locked.

After the mob was driven out the representatives, who had hastily scattered, reassembled. Manuel F. Rossy, speaker of the House, appointed three members to investigate the riot. They are A. Reyes Delgado, Leopoldo Tormes and Antonio Inero.

Representative Tormes said members of the House in recent days had received anonymous letters threatening destruction of the capitol. He said Albizu Campos urged the crowd in the plaza to go to the capitol and "get" the members. As Tormes made his statement h edrew his right hand across his throat.

Hitler Winner in Vote To Bar Oldenburg Diet

Berlin, April 17 (U.P.).—The Fascist party of Adolf Hitler won another victory tonight when, with support of the Communists, they put over a referendum to dissolve the Diet in the State of Oldenberg. The vote was 125,365 to 5,796. The Fascists and their allies, the Nationalists, have been in a minority in the Diet. New elections will be about May 29.

At Dresden a similar referendum failed to dissolve the Saxon Diet. Only 36 per cent of the electorate voted, whereas 51 per cent is required. Out of the 1,392,000 votes cast, the Fascists and Nationalists polled 1,318,000 as compared to 53,448 for their political foes.

26,522 Cars Circle Basin In Cherry Bloom Parade

Sunny Skies Draw Many Thousands to City to Witness Spectacle; Heavy Pedestrian Flow Hampers Vehicular Traffic.

Washington was the mecca for thousands of out-of-town visitors yesterday with the Japanese cherry blossoms drawing a steady stream of traffic around the Tidal Basin. An actual count by the Park Police showed that 26,522 automobiles passed over the Inlet Bridge just below the polo field, with an equal division of local and visiting cars.

The weather was clear and warm, causing additional thousands of pedestrians to visit the scene of the famous blossoms by street car and bus. According to Capt. Ray C. Montgomery, superintendent of the United States Park Police, his men were confronted with the worst pedestrian problem yesterday they have seen for years. Crowds walked around the Tidal Basin and insisted on walking in the roads, slowing traffic to some extent.

Motor traffic was routed differently this year than any other year, causing a smooth, even flow of traffic with little congestion or confusion. Cars to the Tidal Basin were routed by way of Fourteenth and Seventeenth streets, moving clockwise around the Basin. Cars that used Seventeenth street had to turn left at the John Paul Jones monument and join the Fourteenth street traffic flow.

The Highway Bridge was closed to traffic entering Washington and all

$500,000 Painting Guarded In Britain From Theft Gang

Detectives Placed in Lambton Castle to Watch "The Red Boy," Which Will Be Auctioned Off Today; Foreign Dealers to Attend.

Durham, England, April 17 (U.P.).—Detectives were stationed in every room of Lambton Castle tonight to guard Lawrence's masterpiece, "The Red Boy," against the threat of theft by an international gang of criminals.

The precautions were taken in connection with the scheduled auction of the painting tomorrow and because of recent thefts of art treasures in London.

Police said it was obvious an international gang is operating in this country, and they are particularly interested in art treasures.

The Lambton Castle contains many priceless relics, and only connoisseurs, art dealers and museum officials will be admitted for the auction tomorrow. Many of the dealers came from foreign countries for the sale.

"The Red Boy" is owned by the Earl of Durham, who valued it at more than $500,000. Jules Bache, New York millionaire, was said to have offered more than $250,000 for the painting, but the deal fell through.

The subject of the painting was Master Lambton, son of the first earl, for whom Sir Thomas Lawrence did the work in 1827. The boy died when 13 years old. In the painting he is shown seated on a rock, wearing a crimson velvet suit, with white frilled collar and cuffs.

High taxes forced the present earl to part with it, and later other treasures at the castle will be sold.

SENATE BODY HEARS AUTO CHIEFS TODAY

Leaders Will Plead Against Discriminatory Excise Tax on Vehicles.

By WILLIAM ULLMAN.

The automotive industry today tackles the most important selling task it has ever undertaken. As one man, the Nation's most prominent motor executives are going before the Senate finance committee this morning to sell the idea that a discriminatory excise tax on motor vehicles will so cripple the motor car sales that the industry can not carry out the comeback attempt it has launched at a cost of many millions.

If they can accomplish this selling venture, they will return to their desks tomorrow to speed the industry's program of recovery. If they fail to convince the Senate committee of the economic wisdom and justice of their position, they see a protracted period of unemployment difficulty ahead for the 4,000,000 persons dependent upon automotive transportation for their livelihood.

Map Final Plans.

Yesterday the industry's leaders sat down together in a meeting here to map the final details of the argument which is to be presented to the Senate committee. The presentation will be made by George M. Graham, vice president of the Rockne Motors Corporation, and spokesman for the taxation committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

It is solely because of its retarding effect upon the industry's employment program that the Senate will be asked to reject the special motor vehicle excise tax included in the House revenue bill. This tax of 3 per cent on passenger cars, 2 per cent on trucks and 1 per cent on tires, parts and accessories not only will raise prices, but, as a discriminatory levy, identifies the motor vehicle with strictly luxury products. Such a classification, the car manufacturers maintain, is flagrantly at variance with the facts.

Will Stress Efforts.

Mr. Graham's brief will lay its greatest stress upon the fact that the present effort of the motor companies to stimulate buying is much more imperatively related to employment than to profits. At present prices the industry can not hope for good earnings, but if sales can be increased, tens of thousands of men will be put back to work, and thus remedy the fundamental problem of the depression.

The list of those who will represent the industry before the finance committee of the Senate includes:

Alfred P. Sloan, president of General Motors Corporation; Edsel Ford, president of the Ford Motor Co.; Walter P. Chrysler, president of the Chrysler Corporation; A. R. Erskine, chairman of the board, Studebaker Corporation; C. W. Nash, chairman of the board, Nash Motors Co.; Roy D. Chapin, chairman of the board, Hudson Motor Car Co.; E. L. Cord, president, Auburn Automobile Co.; A. J. Brosseau, president, Mack Trucks, Inc.; Alfred H. Swayne, vice president, General Motors; Robert C. Graham, vice president, Graham-Paige Motor Co.; T. R. Dahl, vice president of the White Motor Co., and George M. Graham, vice president of Rockne Motors Corporation.

Willing to Share.

It is not a blanket release from higher taxes at this time that is sought by the motor car industry, Mr. Graham is prepared to assure the committee. It is willing to share in any general increase, as evidenced by its lack of opposition to the proposed general manufacturers' tax before it was eliminated from the original House revenue bill.

As to special excise taxes which inferentially label the motor vehicle a luxury, every motor company is unalterably opposed to them. Such a levy imposes an actual obstacle to motor car sales by arbitrarily increasing the price and the psychologic one of stigmatizing the automobile as a nonessential.

The industry is prepared to emphasize both points at the Senate hearing.

3 Cutters Hunt in Vain For Lost Honeymooners

San Pedro, Calif., April 17 (A.P.).—Three Coast Guard cutters continued today with dwindling hope a search for Mr. and Mrs. Hoot Ralph, young honeymooners, who left for Catalina Island last Monday in a 50-foot power boat and never arrived. No anxiety was felt by relatives until they failed to return Friday.

Many privately owned small craft joined in the search today, visiting isolated mainland shores and bays and inlets of Catalina and San Clemente Islands. Ralph is a county beach life guard, and his bride was said to be a powerful swimmer.

to Georgia avenue and Morton street, where Restifo allegedly said: "I'm a good fellow. Here's $40. This will fix us up for last night."

Clapper then asked him for what reason he was giving the money and Restifo allegedly explained that he had mistaken them for a couple of policemen who had raided his place the night before.

The two deputy marshals were then allegedly told to keep the money and buy some cigars. They brought him back to the Tenth Precinct station, where Restifo was questioned by Capt. Ira Sheetz, who placed the bribery charge against him.

Another version of the story, given by Tenth Precinct police, is that Restifo mistook Clapper for a friend from whom he had borrowed $35 on the night previous so as to be able to bond his friends, who had been arrested.

Those who participated in the raid on the Restifo apartment, according to police, were Detectives E. W. Bryant, R. L. Jones, R. M. McCarthy and Sergt. J. R. Leach.

Powys' Hunt for Arcadia Arouses Moot Question

By JOHN J. DALY

THEORY and practice again conflict.

John Cooper Powys, the novelist, for the greater part of his 60 years, roamed the world seeking a place where he might settle down and really live, to put in practice his pet theory—that pure laziness is the secret of happiness.

Had this old stager been only half as ambitious in theory as in practice he would have found Arcadia long ago. A lazy man carries his own Paradise with him.

Now, the novelist, waving farewell to skyscrapers, subways and busy people, leaves civilization for parts unknown to become a hermit, not letting even his closest friends know his destination except that he is off to an old abandoned farm, away, away in the green woods, to spend the rest of his life in absolute seclusion.

Busy men all, business men will go with the novelist if only in their minds' wanderings—for it means an abandonment of the hurried morning ablutions, bolted breakfasts, the breathless dash for bus or train, the tardy arrival at the office, the mad dictation, the rush for lunch, the hectic afternoon indoors when the golf links call, the race for the 5:15, the utter exhaustion before and after dinner, the bridge game at night and then bad dreams.

AS AGAINST all this and what it brings—gray hairs, wrinkles, worry and a nervous breakdown—picture the delight of life in the Arcadian fields, laziness de luxe. Out of bed when you feel like it, or sleep as long as nature administers. Breakfast all the morning, if that is the mood, a long smoke, a walk in the woods, a good book under a tree, a nap, a swim at sunset, a slight supper, and a peaceful evening with reveries in front of a fireplace, lighted logs that cheer and brighten life, wraiths in the smoke-wreaths curling up to the land of dreams.

That, it would seem, is the life.

Trade all this, then for stiff formal dress a choking collar the stuffiness of somebody's dressing room and see where nature furnishes fine fabrics for happiness, finer by far than the artificial stimulus of society.

* * * *

SOME will say the old man is out of his wits, and the old man, in turn, will swear that some folks are just three jumps ahead of a keeper, which proves this is a moot question.

Yet, if laziness—pure, unadulterated laziness—brings real happiness, who shall say that the active, never restless toiler, constantly on the treadmill of life, is a wise man? Who, after all, has the dreams and who has the leisure and who the happiness?

Well, if any one knows where there is an old abandoned farm with a stream on it and some one to do the work, lead the way to Arcadia.

Old-Time Saloon Returns, But Bottles Are All Empty

Only Soft Drinks Are Served as Preliminary Performance of Prohibition Fair Is Staged With Bishop Cannon Attending; Open to Public Today.

"Step right up, folks, and have——"

The reporter entering the basement floor of the Washington Auditorium looked up inquiringly. He faced a saloon, a regular old-time saloon, with the multicolored labels of the entire alcoholic menu on view and, white-coated and red-faced, a real old-time bar man.

The reporter rubbed his eyes and then heard the rest of the invitation: "——a soft drink."

The scribe turned and saw a soda fountain as completely equipped as the saloon except, it developed, that the bottles in the saloon were empty and those in the fountain were full.

Then the reporter blinked again and rubbed his eyes. Standing before the bar, his foot on a rail, gazing with interest at the labeled bottles, was none other than Bishop James Cannon, famous Methodist leader of the dry forces. Photographers, with flashlights, disturbed the bishop and he departed hurriedly—to a speakeasy. The reporter followed. He recognized a man with the bishop—The Rev. William S. Chase, director of the Lord's Day Alliance.

The speakeasy was a sad sight after the saloon. It was not the least bit like the speakeasies you read about (in the magazines)—the palatial emporiums behind brown stone fronts; a bare table in a dingy room, dirty bottles, a few beer kegs and soiled glasses. But there was nothing in the bottles but water. The speakeasy was labeled "Pawnbrokers."

Through a loud speaker came the recorded voice of a woman. She was telling the World War veteran why the eighteenth amendment was not "put over" on him, and she cited pertinent points to support her argument.

The former soldier didn't say a word. Only the woman's voice was heard.

And then the reporter realized why the bottles in the saloon were empty and why the bottles in the speakeasy contained water, and why Bishop Cannon was in a saloon with his foot on the rail. This was the long heralded Prohibition Fair, sponsored by the Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement, which opened its convention here yesterday.

Admission to the fair was by special card. It will be opened to the public today. The fair has been arranged by William Rufus Scott. Besides the saloon and the speakeasy, it exhibits a home that beer is reputed to have built, not the kind of place you would want to live in, and one that prohibition, according to a poster, built. You wouldn't mind living in this one. It can be built for the price of so many beers a day for so many months, the poster said.

There are also displays showing that a great deal more nourishing food can be produced with some of the same ingredients that contribute toward a much lesser amount of beer. And there is a huge sign across the room reading: "Repeal the eighteenth amendment and the saloon will return."

Prior to opening of the fair, the Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement conducted a service in the auditorium. The service was dedicated to Benjamin Franklin, and his call to prayer at the first constitutional convention in 1787 was read by Mrs. A. Haines Lippincott. The congregation sang "Oh God, Our Help in Ages Past," "Oh God, Beneath Whose Guiding Hand" "America, the Beautiful" and Justine Lawrie sang "The Recessional" by Kipling.

At the conclusion of the service the Rev. Allen A. Stockdale asked that a silent one-minute prayer be offered for the return of the Lindbergh baby. The doors of the auditorium were closed while the prayer was offered. The Rev. William L. Darby, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, gave the invocation.

Bishop Cannon occupied a box during the service. Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, chairman of the woman's national committee, who presided, announced that the bishop would address the convention today. Her announcement was greeted with applause. She also announced that Mrs. Thomas Edison will speak briefly tonight.

Today's sessions will be dedicated to Paul Revere, with a breakfast, morning, afternoon and evening sessions. The showing of the talking picture, "Ten Nights in a Bar Room," featuring William Farnum, will be a daily feature of the Prohibition Fair.

Police Seek Motive In Picco's Murder

Have Only Vague Picture of Italian Consular Agent's Slayers.

Springfield, Ill., April 17 (A.P.).—Police tonight scanned the multifarious connections of John M. Picco, Italian consular agent, in an effort to uncover a motive for his assassination late yesterday. They had only a vague description of the three men who waylaid the consul near his home and escaped in an automobile after cutting him down with shotgun fire. A trio of suspects was picked up early today at Alton, Ill., but was released.

Assisting in the investigation was Giuseppi Castruccio, Italian consul at Chicago, who arrived here today with two aids. Mr. Castruccio, himself a target for a bomb in the Nation-wide plot of New Year's Eve, was of the opinion that Picco's death was not the work of anti-Fascist sympathizers. He could throw little light on the case, however.

(Associated Press.)

Gov. Emmerson of Illinois was asked by the State Department yesterday for a full telegraphic report as soon as possible on the killing of John M. Picco, the Italian consular agent, who was shot Saturday night by three unknown men at Springfield, Ill.

Sir Patrick Geddes, 78, Famous Botanist, Dies

Edinburgh, Scotland, April 17 (A.P.).—Sir Patrick Geddes, internationally known scholar and specialist in botany, who was knighted this year, died today at Montpellier, France, messages received here tonight announced. He was 78 years old.

Sir Patrick Geddes had been an instructor at universities of Edinburgh and Montpellier. He was first a teacher of physiology and later concentrated on botany and natural history, exploring in Mexico, Cyprus, Palestine, India and the United States, to carry on his work.

Massie Grilling Is Slated Today

Strain of Murder Trial Is Beginning to Show on Principals.

Honolulu, April 17 (A.P.).—Having shouldered the blame for the killing of Joseph Kahahawai, Lieut. Thomas H. Massie tomorrow faces a grilling at the hands of Honolulu's vigorous young prosecutor, John C. Kelley.

The young naval officer climaxed his court story yesterday by saying he confronted Kahahawai with a pistol in the home of Mrs. Granville Fortescue and that his mind went blank when Kahahawai admitted participating in a criminal attack on Mrs. Massie.

The strain of the trial, now but a fortnight old, has begun to leave indelible scars on Mrs. Massie and Massie, who is 27 years old. A month ago Mrs. Fortescue was vivacious and high spirited. Now her face is drawn and her eyes, when she is in the courtroom, are never still. Massie's hair is slightly streaked with gray and his former boyish face is beginning to appear haggard.

Two Are Feared Dead After Gasoline Blaze

Muskegon, Mich., April 17 (A.P.).—At least one man was burned to death, possibly two, when one of two men who stopped at a farmhouse for gasoline to start their stranded automobile lit a cigarette while the farmer was draining the fuel from his own truck tonight. Charles Mullally, 50, the farmer, died in the fire which destroyed his garage and home.

Officers were waiting for the ruins to cool to search for the body of John Carlson, Muskegon, said by Joe Patarze, his companion, to have been burned to death. Patarze, 38, also of Muskegon, is in Mercy Hospital here with burns about his face and legs.

SMITH ASSAILS PLAN TO CUT FEDERAL PAY

Virginia Representative Says He Will Fight Proposal; Attacks Waste.

Breaking his traditional silence on controversial questions at public gatherings Representative Howard W. Smith, of Alexandria, Va., speaking at the annual banquet of the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce Saturday night, declared that he was "unalterably opposed to the cutting of salaries of Government workers as a means of balancing the Federal budget."

Representative Smith's remarks were brief and came after the toastmaster, Wells A. Sherman, of McLean, Va., in introducing him, stated that the people were asking when the Federal Government was going to withdraw from private business regulation, what was it going to do about the many Federal bureaus that had been created since the beginning of the Wilson administration and what the Federal workers could expect.

In opening his remarks Representative Smith stated that those were questions on which every member of Congress should not be afraid of expressing themselves and it was their duty to take a certain stand. He declared that it was up to the Democrats to reduce Federal expenditures but they should do it discriminately. "It is time to stop waste and bring the Government back to a sound business basis and withdraw gradually from the control of private business," he stated.

"It is time to use the pruning knife," he declared, "but not to use it indiscriminately. It is the duty of Congress to cut the extravagant cost of government, to eliminate the unnecessary bureaus, but they should be trimmed gradually and then only after careful study and consideration."

He asked the citizens of the District to express their personal opinions on all questions. He told the gathering that there was not a lobbyist walking in Washington; that they had adopted new tactics. He declared that the lobbyist nowadays sits in a comfortable office in Washington and mails form letters throughout the Nation with instructions to the people to write their representatives urging them to vote a certain way on a measure under consideration. "This he declares is not the people's own opinions but those of trained lobbyists and the people should rebel against such tactics."

Other speakers during the evening were State Senator John W. Rust, of Fairfax; Delegate Edmund H. Allen, of Fairfax County; Louis C. Carl, president of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce; J. W. May, president of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce; Roy S. Braden, county manager of Arlington County, and G. R. White, of the United States Post-office Department.

VOTE SLATED TODAY ON ECONOMY PLANS

the five-day week principle, appeared to be gaining strength in the House, economy committee members hold if fails to effect members of Congress or any employes of the legislative branch.

Extension Sought.

Legislative counsel for the committee are attempting to arrive at some extension of the plan that would reach this group. They will lay their proposals before the committee probably today. Counsel also have been instructed to provide for voluntary pay remissions by members of the judiciary, whose salaries may not be cut under the Constitution.

If Chairman McDuffie wins his fight for a separate salary-cut rider, and it now seems unlikely, there will be such a battle of oratory and parliamentary strategy on the House floor tomorrow as has seldom been seen in Congress.

Antireductionists will be led by Representative Fiorello H. LaGuardia, New York Progressive, and a liaison of three influential Democratic committee chairmen, Representatives John J. Cochran, of the expenditures committee; William P. Connery, of the labor committee, and James M. Mead, of the committee on postoffices and post roads. Representative McDuffie will lead the pay-cut forces.

Moslem Rioters Clash With Police in Bombay

Bombay, India, April 17 (U.P.).—Serious rioting broke out today at the conclusion of the Moslem festival at the Bhendy Bazar in the Moslem area of Bombay. The celebrators attacked police, who fired on them. One person was wounded. Several others were arrested.

Meanwhile, the Governor of the United Provinces refused to certify a sound news film entitled "Gandhi Meets the King," which concerned the visit of the Mahatma Gandhi to London, where, among other issues, he failed to settle the Hindu-Moslem controversy in India.

Incipient Riots Halted By New Zealand Police

Auckland, New Zealand, April 17 (A.P.).—The unemployed of Auckland abandoned their avowed intention of holding an outlawed public meeting today, but volunteer police were called upon to break up bands of hoodlums. The city remained tense after the intermittent rioting and looting of last week.

Unconfirmed rumors were current that the dominion government's emergency economy measures, which include a 10 per cent salary and wage cut for all government employes, would be met by a general strike.

Ambassador Willys Due Home on Europa Today

(Associated Press.)

John N. Willys, American Ambassador to Poland, will arrive in New York today aboard the Europa for a vacation. He left Warsaw after cabling the State Department of his intention of taking a leave, and officials said yesterday he would discuss the extent of his absence after reaching the Capital.

No reason for the Ambassador's return to this country was given by him to the Department. It has denied several times since he took the post that he intended resigning in the near future.

Georgia G. O. P. Breach Widening

Faction Chief Says Present Committee Illegal; Plans to Seize Control.

Savannah, Ga., April 17 (A.P.).—J. G. Lemon, Savannah Negro Republican leader, tonight said ten or more members of the 1930 State central committee had demanded that the former officers of the group take charge of party affairs, contending the present Republican party in Georgia is organized illegally.

Lemon said the Republicans affiliated with him planned to ignore the party as set up at a recent State convention in Atlanta and call county, district and State conventions.

He said all action taken by the faction now in control would thus be wiped out and a new start made.

The Lemon faction contends that 30 members of the old central committee were replaced irregularly. He said Mamie Williams, Savannah Negro, who is national committeewoman, is in sympathy with the present movement although she has not signed the petition to the old committee.

MORE ARRESTS SEEN IN KREUGER FRAUDS

Inquiry Likely to Extend to New York; Paper Says He Gave Hitler Funds.

Stockholm, Sweden, April 17 (A.P.).—A special "Kreuger department of police" including four lawyers and six detectives will be set up here tomorrow to conduct an international inquiry into the affairs of the late Ivar Kreuger, who killed himself in Paris recently just before chaos enveloped his vast financial enterprises.

It was understood that more arrests would be made here soon, and that the police activities probably would extend to New York, Berlin, Paris, Amsterdam and Geneva.

Investigators today got fresh light on the forged Italian government bonds allegedly found among the documents of Kreuger & Toll Co., Kreuger's largest financial company.

It was said to have been established that the bonds, representing normally about $100,000,000, had been printed at Kreuger's direction by a private firm in Stockholm about a year ago. The head of the firm said that only forms had been turned out, that they bore no signatures or numbers and that in only a few of them was the sum they were supposed to represent inserted. The firm had no reason to suspect the forms were to be used for an illegitimate purpose, it was said. The experts who investigated said that 42 treasury bonds of £500,000 each had been forged by Kreuger, and that he alone was responsible for their presence in his private safe. The forged signature, E. Brelli, for the Italian monopolies board was clumsily done, the experts said.

The newspaper Social Demokraten today said an examination of Kreuger & Toll documents showed Kreuger had given financial support to "a Fascist movement in Germany and Spain."

The paper asserts there was found a receipt for 5,000,000 pesetas among the papers, purporting to be on behalf of Alfonso XIII, former King of Spain, and another for 100,000 reichmarks from Adolf Hitler, head of the Nazis of Germany.

LINDBERGH ACTIVITY SEEN IN MANEUVERS

marks of extensive use were on it. It was found 150 yards from the beach in a deep ravine through which runs a small brook which Bosworth was fishing. It had burst open and apparently had been there more than a week.

Contents of the bag included: Man's blue serge suit with maker's name removed; new leather belt, size 40; 16 cents; woman's handkerchief; pocket comb; paper and envelopes; man's nose glasses with heavy silk cord; several handkerchiefs; several collars, size 17; keys in a container; pink silk nightcap; soft white shirt with detachable collar, maker's mark removed; leather cigarette case stamped Hudson S. S. Lines; coil of electric wire; brown felt hat with "Young's Brothers" stamped on sweat band; ticket stub to Paramount Theater, New York City, no date.

State Police Corporal Richard Cleary, to whom Bosworth turned over the bag, said it obviously had been discarded by someone who wished to conceal his identity and apparently had been thrown from an airplane.

Hopewell, N. J., April 17 (A.P.).—A reiteration of faith in his ability to treat with the kidnapers of the Lindbergh baby came today from Dr. John F. Condon as the 72-year-old "Jafsie" spent an active Sunday appearing as an umpire in a charity baseball game.

"We are in contact with the kidnapers and the baby will be returned soon, I hope," said the retired educator and welfare worker at an athletic field at City Island, east of his New York home.

Norfolk, Va., April 17 (A.P.).—An unchanged status of watching and waiting was reported tonight in the negotiations of three Norfolk intermediaries seeking to recover the stolen Lindbergh baby.

All three men, Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage, retired; John Hughes Curtis and the Very Rev. H. Dobson-Peacock, remained in the city this week-end and all three reported there was no new development.

EIGHT IN MISSISSIPPI SEIZED IN RUM PLOT

More Arrests Are Promised After Big Liquor Cargo Is Confiscated.

Biloxi, Miss., April 17 (A.P.).—Eight men were arrested here today in connection with an alleged rumrunning syndicate and the seizure by police and the Coast Guard of $50,000 worth of imported liquor Friday afternoon. Chief of Police Alonzo Gabrich promised additional arrests.

Those held on charges of transportation and possessing liquors are: John Lewis, John Williams, Charles Bance, Emile Melerine, James Powell, Arthur Thornton and, Richard Kennedy, all of Biloxi, and Charles Brown, who gave New York as his address.

Chief Gabrich said he also has warrants for the arrest of Frank Johnson, prominent Biloxian; Voyle Moran, boat captain, and Roy Rosall, and that he will seize two trucks and two boats.

The boats are the Mary D., seized here by the Coast Guard with a 250-case cargo of imported liquors, and the Iona Louise. Both are alleged to have been implicated in the transportation of liquor from a mother rum ship off Chandeleur Island to Biloxi Harbor. The rumrunners were protected by fellow workers armed with machine guns during the unloading process, police said.

The liquor seized here on a freight car was billed for Stevens Point, Wis.

Hair Clew Fails to Shed Light on Woman's Death

Warsaw, Poland, April 17 (A.P.).—An autopsy disclosed today that hair clutched in a clenched fist of Mrs. Grace Edna Mott, of New York, American missionary found slain in her apartment here Friday, was her own and the police continued their investigation into her brutal murder.

The Polish Telegraphic Agency said the authorities would inquire into the relations existing between members of a religious sect called the American European Brotherhood, of which she was superintendent. The autopsy showed that death resulted from four knife wounds in her body.

Strike-Breakers Make Liner's Sailing Possible

New York, April 17 (A.P.).—The Shawnee, coastwise steamer of the Clyde-Mallory Line, sailed at 6 a. m. today after a delay of eighteen hours because of the longshoremen's strike. Officials of the line said the cargo was loaded by strike-breakers and no attempt had been made to negotiate with the striking longshoremen.

The strike developed after a pay cut. The Henry R. Mallory, also scheduled to sail at noon Saturday, was still at its pier today.

WHITNEY MAY NAME BIG BEAR OPERATORS

tion of short selling, may materialize when Whitney resumes his testimony on the new material he has given. There is great interest as to the identity of big bear operators, particularly whether they include any big political names.

Some committee members hope to extend the hearings to include the details of "bull" operations, that is, the "long" buyers who order brokers to acquire blocks of stock, in expectation of a price rise.

There are senators who hold that the "bull" operators, big and little, including millions of people who lost in the collapse of October-November 1929, were responsible for much of the inflation that preceded the depression.

Whitney is a stanch defender of the "bear" operators. He points out that a speculator who buys stocks in expectation of a rise must sell at some time, and it is big scale "bull" selling, such as that of 1929, which leads to the most severe price declines. Whitney summarized the situation which occurred in 1929 as one where everybody owned stocks and wanted to sell.

On the other hand, Whitney argues, a man who sells "short" stocks that he does not own, is bound, at whatever loss, to buy an equal amount of stock at some time, and this buying operation may tend to cushion a falling market.

C. A. R. CONVENTION TO OPEN TOMORROW

18,000 Members to Be Represented at Corcoran Gallery Sessions.

Delegates from every State will represent the 18,000 members of Children of the American Revolution at the thirty-seventh annual convention which starts tomorrow at the Corcoran Art Gallery. Mrs. Samuel Shaw Arentz, of Nevada, president of the organization, will preside.

The delegates range in age from 4 to 21 years. Sightseeing tours are planned for those attending. Mrs. Hoover will receive the delegates at the White House, and Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, sister of Vice President Curtis, will be guest of honor at a reception and dance at Congressional Club.

Mrs. Arentz said yesterday that "while the main purpose of the convention is to report the progress of the State societies and confer on methods of improvement, it is quite as important that the children visit the Nation's historic shrines to acquire knowledge and gain inspiration. Anything touching the life of Washington can not fail to interest them.

"Each year they gather around the tree the society planted 36 years ago and listen to Mrs. Eleanor Washington Howard, the last living person born at Mount Vernon, tell the story of the childhood of Washington. The inception of the society is from a statement of Washington as he greeted a group of children during the Revolution, 'We may be beaten by the English on the field of battle, but here is an army that can never be conquered.'"

Among the historic shrines the organization will visit are Wakefield, Fredericksburg, Paul Jones home, Kenmore, Mary Washington's home and her tomb. The members will visit the Capitol and will listen to sessions in the House and Senate. They will visit Mount Vernon by boat.

A colonial play and pageant will be presented on Wednesday evening, and on Friday a program will be broadcast from Mount Vernon Hills, Va., to tell members not attending the convention of the meetings.

SLAIN MINER HELD STRIKERS' MARTYR

Ohio Guardsmen Build Up Defenses as Thousands Attend Funeral.

Cadiz, Ohio, April 17 (A.P.).—Shot to death in a clash with deputy sheriffs and Ohio National Guard observers several days ago, William Kimbell, 55, Bradley, became the martyr of striking bituminous coal miners of eastern Ohio today.

Kimbell was buried at Mount Pleasant, near his home, after between 8,000 and 10,000 fellow strikers and friends marched past his bier in the Methodist Episcopal Church at Smithfield.

Gathering of the strikers at the bier was the signal for National Guard troops in Harrison County to establish strong defenses about the Somers mine of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., near Adena, where Kimbell was killed, and at the Harbor Creek Mining Co. and the Tasa Mining Co., near Hopedale. Miners gathered in Smithfield several hours before the funeral, and after a mass meeting at the fair grounds marched down the main street to the church.

After viewing the body the crowd moved to the cemetery, 9 miles away, and private funeral services were conducted. Throughout the march the miners were orderly.

Dr. White to Speak at Center.

Dr. William A. White, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital, will be the guest speaker of the round table of the Jewish Community Center tomorrow evening at 9 o'clock. He will discuss the significance of mental disease for the understanding of man and the study of the distorted mind in relation to the normal mind.

CURTIS TO ADDRESS CONGRESS OF D. A. R., OPENING TONIGHT

clared that the present age of the fleeting, idle, moving picture brain could profit by the lessons of the Nation's early history in which it was felt that the home was the greatest asset of civilization.

Praises Washington.

Representative Beck praised George Washington in the words of Thomas Jefferson, in which he said, "His integrity was most pure, his justice most inflexible that I have ever known, no motives of interest or consanguinity or friendship or hatred being able to bias his decision. He was, indeed, in every sense of the word, a wise, a good and a great man." The speaker declared that the character of George Washington rested upon a profound spiritual basis. His faith was not in himself, but in his God.

Representative Beck expressed the opinion that the world is living in the darkest hour civilization has known for many centuries. He said the times are more portentous than any since Luther nailed his thesis upon the door of the Wittenberg Cathedral. "No one can tell what any twenty-four hours may bring forth. Civilization is trembling in the balance, and if we had regard solely to the deductions of reason, we would have justification for the fear that the twilight of the gods had come to our western civilization.

Stimulation of Hope.

"Can not we take new heart today, when we recall those other times that 'tried men's souls,' and may not our hopes be stimulated to follow his example, and subordinate the mere deductions of our finite reason to a simple faith, like that of Washington, in the beneficient purposes of Almighty God?"

Hundreds of delegates to the Congress of the D. A. R., which will open in Constitution Hall tonight at a gala session, with Vice President Curtis as the speaker, arrived in Washington yesterday. Hotels chosen as headquarters for the delegations were bright with D. A. R. colors and the Peacock Alley of the Willard, for years the headquarters for prominent delegations, was literally jammed with the visiting patriotic women.

The gratitude of the United States for the friendship of other nations in the trying times of 1776, will be expressed at tonight's sessions by the presence on the program for brief greetings of the Ambassadors of France, Germany, Poland and the Netherlands.

Fess Also to Speak.

Among the other speakers will be Senator Simeon B. Fess, of Ohio, chairman of the National Bicentennial Commission, and Charles Moore, chairman of the National Commission of Fine Arts. Musical interludes will be given by James Melton, tenor; Kenneth Yost, pianist; Lavinia Darve, lyric soprano, and Gertrude Nash.

The national convention of the Children of the American Revolution will start tomorrow also, with many of the D. A. R. delegates as officers of the junior branch chapters as well. The sessions will be held in the Corcoran Gallery of Art and will be presided over by Mrs. Samuel Shaw Arentz, of Nevada, national president. The junior organization will have as delegates hundreds of young people ranging in age from 4 to 21 years.

Among the pilgrimages to be made by the children will be those to Wakefield, Va., where the house in which Washington was born has been reconstructed on its old foundations, and to Fredericksburg and Mount Vernon. On Thursday the children will visit the Capitol and attend the sessions of the Senate and the House and will be received by the Vice President and the Speaker in their own offices. On Wednesday Mrs. Hoover will receive the C. A. R. delegates at a special reception at the White House.

On their trip to Mount Vernon the C. A. R. delegates will be accompanied by Mrs. Eleanor Washington Howard, their honorary president, who was the last child born at Mount Vernon; she will tell them incidents of her childhood there.

Body to Fix Ohio Blast Repair Responsibility

Columbus, Ohio, April 17 (A.P.).—While investigators continue their attempts to determine the cause of the explosion which last Thursday wrecked Ohio's new $6,000,000 State office building, claiming nine lives and injuring scores, attorneys for the State and the contractors will meet tomorrow to discuss financial responsibility for repairing the damage.

Although no accurate damage estimate has been made by officials, it generally was agreed that the damage would approximate $1,000,000. Joseph Hostetler, of Cleveland, director of Gov. George White's official investigating committee, said that he felt the State could not be held reponsible and that the costs of repairs or reconstruction would not fall upon the taxpayers.

conclusions arrived at in advance of the creation by the convention of the committee on platform and resolutions and its meeting as a formally constituted body following such creation, can be only tentative and advisory.

"It seems obvious, however, that by meeting in advance of the convention informally and provisionally, much of the arduous work of the committee can be performed prior to the convention itself with beneficial results to the platform which is ultimately to be prepared for the consideration of the convention.

"It would thereby conserve the time and energies of the members of the committee during the actual period of the convention when the definitive work of the committee is performed, after its formal election by the convention itself.

GERMANS AT GENEVA TALK WITH STIMSON

U. S. Secretary of State May Attend General Session of Arms Council Today.

Geneva, April 17 (A.P.).—Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson sought from talks with Germany's representatives today a method of reducing armaments that would be most likely to bring success to the international disarmament conference here.

The American secretary, preliminary to a meeting of the general commission of the conference tomorrow, was visited by Chancellor Heinrich Bruening and Dr. Bernard von Buelow.

With them he discussed the general subject of disarmament, but especially the method of reduction most likely to be accepted. He told interviewers, on his arrival yesterday, he hoped to assist in bringing about some concrete result as one of the most valuable methods of contriubting to world peace.

Mr. Stimson may attend the meeting of the general commission scheduled for 10 a. m. tomorrow. But all today he remained at Villa Manor Bessinge, his temporary home in Geneva, most of the time resting in bed. He was reported to be tired and suffering from a slightly sore throat.

He met other delegates of the conference yesterday. Among them were Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary; Tewfik Rushdi Bey, Turkish foreign minister; Sir Eric Drummond, secretary general of the League of Nations, and Arthur Henderson, president of the conference.

From them and members of the American delegation he acquainted himself with the problems of the conference in preparation for his own participation.

26,522 CARS CIRCLE CHERRY BUD SHOW

cars from Virginia were sent over the new Memorial Highway to the Arlington Memorial Bridge, around Lincoln Memorial and thence to the road around the Basin.

The official count made yesterday showed a decrease of several thousand cars from last year. The count then was 32,000 cars, but both Capt. Montgomery, in charge of the park police, and Lieut. H. Helm, his aid, estimated that the traffic yesterday was as heavy as last year, and the higher count was probably due to the confusion last year.

Every member of the Park Police was on duty yesterday with the exception of Capt. Carroll, who is ill. All leave and regular days off were canceled and with the assistance of the Metropolitan Police Department, the heavy flow of traffic was handled effeciently. Hundreds of compliments were received at the office of the Park Police.

With the many thousands of persons at the Basin, only one arrest was made. A man driving an old car was arrested and charged with bad brakes when he continually struck the car in front of him whenever traffic stopped.

Three road service trucks of the A. A. A., equipped with radio, supplied gasoline and other service to stranded motorists. Whenever a policeman found a motorist who had run out of gas or needed service, a call was sent to the dispatcher at police headquarters and then relayed to the service trucks.

The single blossom blooms that are at their peak now are expected to stay in bloom until Wednesday, and it is thought that with warm weather that the double bloom variety around the Speedway will be in bloom by next Sunday.

Sightseeing and other buses were chartered yesterday by thousands of students and visitors from all over the country. Hotel rooms were at a premium and traffic throughout the city was exceptionally heavy all day.

Hundreds of out-of-town drivers inquired the way to Mount Vernon and made the trip over the new highway. The Lincoln Memorial was swamped by visitors all day and, according to Capt. Montgomery, many more visited the shrine last night.

BONDHOLDERS GIVEN PLAN IN ROAD CRISIS

St. Louis Southwestern Co. Faces Receivership Unless Loan Is Made.

New York, April 17 (A.P.).—A plan to avert a threatened receivership for the St. Louis Southwestern Railway Co., involving a loan of $15,813,415 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, was submitted to bondholders today for ratification.

Under the proposal, holders of the company's first consolidated mortgage 4 per cent gold bonds, the principal amount of which, $20,727,750, falls due on June 1, are asked to exchange them for general and refunding mortgage 5 per cent gold bonds, due July 1, 1990. The latter issue would bear interest coupons payable semiannually beginning July 1 of this year.

The company says it is unable to meet the first consolidated mortgage bonds as well as short term 6 per cent notes, aggregating $9,000,000, falling due the same day.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has agreed to advance a loan sufficient to meet the interest and one-half the principal of the maturing obligations provided the remainder is met by an exchange of bonds and notes, the company's announcement says.

The bank holding the bulk of short term notes, the announcement continues, has agreed to accept promissory 5 per cent notes payable June 1, 1935, in payment of half the principal and "prompt acceptance by the other bank is confidently expected."

The company reported its average net income between 1921 and 1929, after all charges, was $2,221,941, equivalent to $6 a share on all outstanding capital stock.

"If the proposed plan is not accepted," the company's announcement says, "a receivership, with possible loss of principal and interest, as well as expense and indefinite postponement of the payment of claims, must inevitably follow. In view of the established earning power and financial condition of the company under normal conditions, a receivership is wholly unwarranted and can only become necessary in the event these maturities are not funded as provided in this plan."

The company recently was affiliated into the Southern Pacific system. Its announcement was signed by Daniel Upthegrove, president.

M. I. T. Student's Body Sought in Sea

Youth Disappeared While on Outing at Gloucester, Mass.

Gloucester, Mass., April 17 (A.P.).—Coast guardsmen and police searched the shore at Eastern Point today for F. Winchell Reeve, of Western Springs, Ill., a student at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who disappeared while on an outing here last night.

Reeve was with five other men and six girls who drove here in automobiles and spent the day on the estate of John W. Prentiss. About midnight Martin W. Kellogg, who roomed with Reeve in Boston, told police Reeve had gone for wood to replenish a fire and had not returned.

Police searched the rocky shore at the point fearing Reeve might have fallen from a crag and coast guardsmen searched the waters in the vicinity. A plane cruised over the area without avail.

BROADCAST ARTISTS TO HEAR OWN VOICES

Post-RCA-Victor Test to Offer Opportunity in Program Tonight.

Very few radio artists have had the experience of broadcasting over the air and later hearing themselves exactly as the radio listeners did, but this is the thrill that several contestants in The Washington Post-RCA-Victor recording contest will enjoy this evening.

At 5:45 p. m., Miss Olive Sibley, now appearing in "Dance Dreams" at Loew's Palace Theater; Miss F. V. Phillips 3806 Jenifer street, Chevy Chase, Md.; Paul Widmayer, 1442 Monroe street northwest, and Charles Milton Jones, of Hyattsville, Md., will participate in a broadcast from radio Station WOL. The program will be picked up at the several Washington Post recording stations and transferred to RCA-Victor records from the radio receivers. It will then be possible for the artists to hear exactly how they "got over" to the radio listeners, following their program.

With the exception of Miss Sibley, who was specially invited by The Washington Post to sing on this occasion, those who will broadcast were selected haphazardly from the list of recording contestants. Miss Phillips and Mr. Widmayer have never before appeared on a radio program, but Mr. Jones was recently heard on an American Legion program broadcast by Station WOL.

The present contest was inaugurated by The Washington Post, cooperating with the RCA-Victor Co. to reveal some of the splendid talent that is now dormant in Washington and the vicinity. Merchandise prizes totaling $700 in value are offered, together with an opportunity of visiting the Camden laboratories of the Victor Co. with all expenses paid. The fortunate winners of the latter prizes will also make Victor records at the laboratory that may lead to a very profitable commercial affiliation.

The contest ends at 6 p. m. Saturday. Until that time every reader of The Washington Post (you need not be a subscriber), is privileged to visit one of the recording stations listed below and make a record of voice or musical instrument without cost or obligation.

Records will be submitted to a committee of judges for rating, after which they will permanently belong to the contestant. The decision of the judges will be final and in case of ties duplicate prizes will be awarded.

Free auditions and records are available any day this week, during regular store hours, at the following "home recording" stations:

French Press Sees U. S. On Verge of Prosperity

Paris, April 17 (A.P.).—A belief that the financial crisis in the United States now is passing through its final "healing phase" and America is headed for renewed prosperity was expressed today in the newspaper Le Temps. The newspaper said it thought the American recovery would be achieved without any real inflation.

"American money will remain stable," said its weekly financial review. "Losses will be registered and accepted. The United States will enter a period of new credits with the likelihood of an economic prosperity less brilliant than before the crisis, but more real and more solid."

FROM Xanthi and Cavalla . . . Smyrna and Samsoun . . . the finest Turkish tobaccos travel 4,000 miles to add flavor and fragrance to CHESTERFIELD.

4000 miles for better taste

TURKISH tobacco is strung leaf-by-leaf and hung in long strands to dry and cure in the sun. In every important tobacco-growing center of Turkey, CHESTERFIELD has its own tobacco buyers.

CIGARETTE smokers owe a lot to Turkish tobacco, for it was cigarettes made out of Turkish tobacco that first became the vogue in this country.

Then it was found that a blend of Turkish and Domestic tobaccos was better than either kind of tobacco straight. It takes just the right amount of the right kind of Turkish tobacco to give a cigarette better taste. For Turkish tobacco is to cigarettes what seasoning is to food—the spice—the sauce. You want enough but not too much.

There is just enough Turkish in CHESTERFIELDS to give them a better flavor, a more pleasing aroma; to make them taste better.

Turkish tobacco must pay an import duty of 35c a pound; but cost doesn't count when it comes to making CHESTERFIELD the best cigarette that science and money can produce.

DEBT PROPAGANDA.

Sir Austen Chamberlain contributes his mite to the propaganda for shifting Europe's debt burden to American taxpayers. In an article in the New York Times of Sunday he presents what is doubtless regarded as a shrewd array of reasons why the United States should continue to finance European nations. He alludes to Britain's feat in balancing the budget, which evokes applause in this country and inspires Americans to "go and do likewise." Sir Austen thinks he sees in Europe a stronger desire for agreement and cooperation in behalf of world betterment. He makes a plea for the faithful observance of treaties and the "plighted word," and reinforces his plea by referring to President Hoover's notification to China and Japan that no change brought about by force or pressure will be recognized. This principle, says Sir Austen, is of equal validity in Europe.

Then, getting down to the real object of the propaganda, the distinguished former foreign secretary remarks:

> There is no cure for the evil from which the whole world, not excepting the United States, is suffering, unless the burden of war debts is dealt with at the same time and in the same spirit as the burden of reparations. President Hoover recognized the essential connection between the two questions. He included both in his proposal and wedded them to each other. No man henceforth may put them asunder!

This is the plausible method of asserting that if America's debtors can not collect from Germany they will repudiate their debt to the United States. Two wrongs are to make the whole world right.

Holding immense regions wrested from Germany and her allies, devoting immense sums to increase of armaments, and no longer enjoying the benefits of reparation payments which Germany borrowed from Americans, this distinguished spokesman of Europe blandly proposes that the United States shall give fresh loans, in the shape of cancellation of the debts.

"European good will, European agreement and European sacrifices will all have been in vain unless to the American people are also given wisdom and understanding," is the conclusion reached by Sir Austen Chamberlain.

Does he mean that the American people were foolish when they lent excessive billions to Germany, which were largely turned over to America's debtors who now hope to avoid a reckoning? If so, Americans will agree with him. Or does he mean that the American people will be foolish unless they continue to lend billions on shaky security to Europe?

Americans would be better disposed to cooperate with Europe if the European good will referred to by Sir Austen were materialized in an agreement to reduce armaments. So long as the deadlock prevails at Geneva it is idle to prate of European good will, agreements and sacrifices. Americans are an uncouth and practical people who believe that promises to promote disarmament should be followed by fulfillment of the promises. They are unable to understand why foreign powers which squander excessive sums upon war preparations can have the impudence to ask the United States to assume their debt burdens.

The refusal of Americans to lend additional gold to Germany causes acute alarm among the debtors to the United States, because Germany can not continue to pay reparations on borrowed American money. The debtors can not think of anything better than to propose that if they forego collection of reparations, the United States will be in duty bound to forego collection of the debts. This would be equivalent to scrapping the debt agreements. What becomes of Sir Austen's plea for "the faithful observance of treaties and respect for the plighted word?"

Great European nations have given their word that they will pay their debts to the United States. Every attempt to wriggle away from this obligation, uttered by any statesman of Europe, is a blow at international good will. Such propaganda as that fostered by Sir Austen Chamberlain antagonizes millions of Americans and makes them more determined than ever to hold Europe to observance of its plighted word.

COTTON AND WHEAT ABROAD.

The increased demand for American cotton in India and American wheat in Europe offers some encouragement to farmers. The visit of a representative of the Grain Stabilization Corporation in foreign capitals may have important results. If satisfactory credit facilities can be arranged there is little doubt that Farm Board wheat can be disposed of before the new crop season. Of the estimated requirements of Europe, including the United Kingdom, of 568,000,000 bushels of wheat, 312,000,000 bushels had been imported up to the February computation. This left 256,000,000 bushels to be supplied. Deducting the 40,000,000 appropriated for relief by Congress from the Farm Board's stock, that holding now amounts to between 130,000,000 and 135,000,000 bushels. If arrangements should be concluded for selling the Government wheat abroad it would still leave a balance to be supplied by Argentina, Canada and Australia in excess of 120,000,000 bushels.

If the Farm Board wheat is not disposed of the carryover into the new crop year next July will set a new record, amounting to about 418,000,000 bushels, as compared with 334,000,000 bushels last year, a virtual offset to the decrease anticipated in the new crop. This year's yield in the United States, from present indications, probably will not exceed 750,000,000 bushels, or about 50,000,000 bushels in excess of home consumption. Since American exports average more than 100,000,000 bushels, and the Russian shortage removes competition from that source, the prospects are better for clearing off much of the heavy surplus.

The outlook for American cotton exports is improved, because low prices have enabled United States cotton to supplant Indian cotton not only in Europe but in Asia to a notable extent. In the first six months of the present season the consumption of cotton from India in the mills of the world fell off over 200,000 bales, while American cotton sales, including exports to the Orient, increased nearly 800,000 bales. Low price and better grades have enabled American cotton to regain markets lost two years ago. The business at present is not highly profitable, but it is helping to get rid of the surplus.

THE NATIONAL SYMPHONY.

Washington at last has an opportunity to establish the long-desired national symphony orchestra. Beginning tomorrow, all the civic groups of the District will be canvassed, and their membership urged to give their active support to the new orchestra.

It is pleasing to see such a worthy enterprise moving toward success, backed by the confidence and enthusiasm of leaders of the organization. The guarantee fund of $75,000 necessary for next season's concert series is only slightly more than half subscribed, but it is to be hoped that the energy and enthusiasm shown by members of the orchestra organization, from Conductor Hans Kindler down, will be matched by the support needed from the citizens of Washington.

For the comparatively modest guarantee fund, the children of Washington will be able to hear for the second year symphonic music, at their own children's concerts; hundreds of persons who heretofore have heard such music rarely or not at all will be able to attend popular concerts on Sunday afternoons at prices lower than any visiting orchestra could meet; the city, during this Bicentennial year, will be able to boast a symphony orchestra, and thus be on a par in this respect with every other city of like size in the country; and lastly, 75 fine musicians will be given jobs who might otherwise be in the ranks of the unemployed, and the money they receive will be spent here, in the support of themselves and their families.

The attendance figures at last year's concerts prove that this orchestra filled a very real need. Attendance at the adult concerts ranged from 2,000 to 4,000, and the children's concerts grew from 350 attendance on the first day to well over 1,000.

Washington owes Hans Kindler a debt of gratitude for his fiery energy, unstinting labor and great musicianship in creating this orchestra. The citizens of Washington can not allow his work to languish. They should give it the hearty aid that it deserves.

"THE LITTLE MAN."

For the moment the Democratic race for the presidential nomination has resolved itself into a fight over who is the champion of the "little man." Gov. Roosevelt made a bid for the honor in his recent radio address by throwing imaginary life lines to distressed farmers, to "little banks" and small home owners. But Democrats are not content to let Gov. Roosevelt sit on a pedestal as the only friend of the under dog. His championship of the "little man" brought a fiery declaration of war from Al Smith and a curt challenge from "Alfalfa Bill" Murray as to the governor's right to that distinction.

When it comes to befriending the "little man" Gov. Murray wants it understood that he will yield to no one. What does Gov. Roosevelt, of the wealthy State of New York, intend to do for the little fellow? Will he kick speculators and gamblers out of the high seats from which the money of the United States is controlled? Will he follow his friend and supporter, Senator Wheeler, into the labyrinth of bimetallism? "Alfalfa Bill" has proclaimed to all the country the steps that are necessary to bring the under dogs out of the woods. Does Gov. Roosevelt suppose that he can match himself against the dyed-in-the-wool champion?

If the Democratic party intends to direct its appeal to the "little man," there is no question as to whom its candidate will be. Gov. Murray can cook up more schemes of raising the humble to the seats of the mighty and trampling the leaders of industry and finance into the dust than any other candidate this side of Moscow. It seems highly improbable that Gov. Roosevelt will try to compete with him. Before launching such a flimsy campaign argument, the New York executive should have realized that Oklahoma's comedian had stolen the show.

Aside from the challenge from Oklahoma, the vision of Al Smith standing with his hat and coat off and a look of grim determination on his face will be a sobering influence when Gov. Roosevelt arises at the little private Jefferson Day celebration arranged for him at St. Paul, Minn., tonight. It is not difficult to see that the "little man" has gotten Gov. Roosevelt into no end of trouble. On one side of him stands "Alfalfa Bill" with a vicious snare; on the other is Al with a brickbat. The manner in which Gov. Roosevelt handles the "little man" in his forthcoming address may be a deciding factor in the Democratic scramble.

Statistics show that 11,000,000,000 linear feet of words are printed in the United States each year, including advice to the lovelorn and to Hoover.

The bear raids were pretty swift, but they don't compare with the bear flight from the Senate probe.

HAWAII AND THE PHILIPPINES

By VICENTE VILLAMIN.

Hawaii is romantically described as the paradise of the Pacific. Persuaded that there is room for only one paradise under the Stars and Stripes, Hawaii is anxious to separate the Philippines from the American Commonwealth of States, Territories and insular possessions.

The Hawaiian delegate in Congress frankly advised the House committee on insular affairs that he was "whole-heartedly in favor of independence for the Philippines because many of the questions that are bound up in our interest will be solved automatically by such definite action."

The two leading questions are (a) the application of the American immigration laws to Filipinos and (b) the enforcement of the tariff act on Philippine products. With independence Filipinos will be kept out of the United States like other Oriental peoples, and Philippine products will no longer be admitted free of duty.

Upon these two questions the delegate took a double-barreled position. While favoring the exclusion of Philippine products, especially sugar, he opposes the exclusion of Filipino laborers from Hawaii, for Filipino labor is the mainstay of the Hawaiian sugar and pineapple industries. The Hawaiian Sugar Planters' Association is not at one with this position.

Today the 66,000 Filipinos in Hawaii, owing allegiance to the United States, are supporters of American authority in that Territory. In the event of independence that allegiance will cease and most of them will become merely contract laborers under the American flag. These facts are significant, considering that of the 375,000 total Hawaiian population 144,000 are Japanese and 34,000 are Chinese and Koreans. Although most of these Orientals are American citizens they are privileged with a dual allegiance.

The Filipinos in Hawaii remit about $3,000,000 annually to the Philippines. Those who have returned home find themselves better equipped to undertake business enterprises. Those who have gone to the Pacific Coast, especially to California, are almost entirely an economic loss to the Philippines. Their lot on the mainland has not been easy and fruitful.

The Hawaiians who do not want Filipinos to be excluded from Hawaii because their labor is indispensable should remember that on the Pacific Coast Filipino labor is also needed in stoop-work on the farm which white workers do not care to take up. If an exemption is made as to Hawaii, an application for similar treatment by employers of Filipinos on the Coast can not be consistently denied.

It seems that the Hawaiian commercial interests are unduly disturbed over the possibilities of the Philippines as a source of tropical products. The fear must border on hysteria when a Hawaiian circular speaks of Philippine mango, a fruit that is not grown in the United States, as a menace because "the delicious nature of the product leaves a threat so serious as to be deserving of your consideration."

Philippine sugar is not looked upon with favor by the Hawaiians, although several sugar centrals in the Philippines are owned by them. And the ability of the Philippines to grow pineapples has already evoked the suggestion from Hawaii that there should be a restriction on the number of the canned product entering the United States. It is California capital that is especially interested in growing pineapples in the Philippines, after receiving discouragements in Hawaii.

Being both under the American flag Hawaii can afford to liberalize her attitude toward the Philippines and give a better exhibition of her adherence to the principle of live and let live.

POST HASTE.

The House committee doesn't like the idea of an omnibus bill, but let's see them get all those economies into anything less than a truck.

When the unfortunate time comes that wages, Federal and private, must be cut, let it be remembered that cutting hours of work at least provides more jobs.

New York drys threaten to revive the third party movement. It would be the best way possible to increase the present trend of the Digest poll.

Gov. Roosevelt will dine at the White House with other governors, only governors now in office.

Massachusetts' 36 delegates to the Democratic convention have seldom commanded such advance interest. They are less than 3 per cent of the total, but their division between Frank and Al next week is all-important.

The Republican national committee heads, in not dictating a permanent convention chairman, were determined to be more Democratic than their opponents.

The Secretary of Agriculture approves a referendum. Since he is simply showing the Missouri G. O. P. that he accepts the party dictum, surely no one will be unjust enough to call it a Hyde-saving gesture.

General Prosperity hasn't marshaled the shock troops yet, but some business scouts appear to have escaped from the entanglements of that revolving corner.

The Puritans hated bear-baiting, says Macaulay, not because it gave pain to the bear, but because it gave pleasure to the spectators. How is it with the Senate?

Mayor Walker is staging a "Beer for Taxation" parade for May 14. His marchers would not walk a block for 2.75 beer if they thought that was to be the limit once the lid was off.

President Whitney has sent over the footprints showing where the bears entered the market. But the Senate wants to know how they came out.

COWARDS IN THE RING.

It is one thing to be game before a vast audience which has paid one high compensation, and when one's career and very livelihood depend on one's show of gameness, and another story altogether when the only thing at stake is one's self-respect.

A good deal of the so-called gameness seen in the prize ring is merely business instinct, says Gene Tunney in Collier's. There is consciousness among prize fighters that if they quit there is little chance for another trial. Matchmakers do not engage quitters or losers as a rule. To keep working means that one must keep winning. This is the inspiration of much of the gameness seen in the ring.

There is no denying that it takes a certain kind of courage even to enter a prize ring. Yet I have known actual cowards who have been professional fighters.

Undoubtedly the compensation and the kind of glory that goes with it furnish much of the urge to continue a professional career. I have never been able to make up my mind just how much true courage is required for success in the fighting game.

I have seen many admirable exhibitions of courage and gameness in the ring, but I have only occasionally been able to tell where business instinct ended and sheer courage began.

One Who Poisons Your Well Is a Foe, Though One of Your Household.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

THE love of money is the root of all evil that troubles America.

We are a race of traitors, without love of country or any sense of group loyalty, each man willing to injure his fellows and seal the doom of his nation if by so doing he can fatten his own purse.

This is not an exaggeration. History proves it literally true.

Once stolen from the Indians, this was a white man's country, free of all race problems. Then it was sacrificed to greed. Money-mad men, unwilling to pay decent wages to their own blood brothers, sought free labor in Africa. Yankee shippers and Southern planters took their profits, lived their little hour in luxury, and bequeathed to their country a war and a problem that the wisest of men cannot solve. How much crime and bloodshed and injustice and waste lie at the door of those who loved money more than they loved their country!

The same story was repeated in Hawaii. Here was a Paradise, offered to America by the rarest good fortune—a heaven on earth for white men, to be shared with peace-loving, inoffensive natives. Did America prize and preserve it? You know the answer. Again greed demanded cheap labor—ignorant labor willing to work for less than the cost of a white man's clothing. Chinese were imported, then Japanese and Koreans, then Portuguese, then Filipinos. Now the Paradise is filled with mixed breeds and is lost to the white man forever.

Always the love of money cries: "We shall not pay the wage demanded by our own kind. Give us cheap labor and quick profits and let the future care for itself." And thus greed, the traitor, sacrifices a nation and afflicts it with evils that Time itself cannot overcome.

Greed dictated the immigration laws that admitted the worst of aliens; greed sent America's money abroad in exchange for worthless bonds. In one instance it cared only for the profit to be made from cheap labor; in the other it cared only for the commission it could earn.

Is there no patriotism among us? Does no man value his country more than a profit? Will the people always look on in helpless silence while greed sacrifices their future to fill its pockets?

Treason is always treason. Why forbid it only in time of war?

PRO AND CON

Press Comment Upon Acts and Actors in the Great American Show, "Politics."

The "Untouchables."

Springfield Republican.

The functions that cost the most are the military, the veterans' pensions and aid, and the agricultural promotion and relief system. These functions account for much more than half of the Government's expenditures.

And these functions are the "untouchables." No one dares to lay a hand on them. Political death is risked by the congressman who attacks the appropriations for military purposes, for the war veterans, and for the Farm Board. The political peril in cutting veterans' aid and pensions, already costing about a billion a year, even with the excuse of an urgent fiscal emergency, may be best appreciated by noting the gathering stampede in the House in support of a $2,000,000,000 bonus payment bill.

It is because of these vast "untouchables," absorbing billions but surrounded by guards of political terrorists swift to exact reprisals in elections, that the search for further economies, covering no more than $150,000,000, becomes so desperate in the budget-balancing round-up.

In Better Health.

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The winter of Republican discontent seems to be passing. The position and morale of the party have greatly improved in the last 90 days. Mr. Hoover has come through the earthquake and eclipse of the early days of the Seventy-second Congress much better than his party expected, and possibly even better than he himself expected.

Consequently, Republican stock has risen a good many points. There is vastly more fight in the Republicans than there was three months ago. "Defeatism" is not so rampant as it was when Congress met back in December, 1931.

Poverty Stricken.

Footnote on Taxes.

Detroit Free Press.

A rose by any other name smells as sweet. A tax by any other name is just as malodorous. An "excise" takes just as much money out of the taxpayer's pocket as a sales tax on the same commodity would. A dictionary defines "excise" as "an inland tax or duty imposed on certain commodities of home production and consumption, as spirits, tobacco, &c., or on their manufacture and sale." James Howell observed in 1660: "We have brought those exotic words 'plundering' and 'storming' and that once abominable word 'excise' to be now familiar among them."

Gentlemen in Washington can not make their levies upon the national purse any more palatable by giving them fancy names.

No Tariff Policy.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Confronted by one of the greatest opportunities in its history, the Democratic party has up to this time displayed an ineptitude no less than astounding. When it captured the lower house of Congress, it defaulted in an obvious chance to put itself on record. Instead of instantly taking up arms against the Hawley-Smoot tariff, and thus notifying other nations of approaching relief from our own, the Democrats did nothing.

Their excuse was that it will be time enough to revise the tariff when they have a majority in both Houses of Congress. The truth is that at this time the party has no tariff policy. It does not know how much of its strength can be rallied to an assault upon the Hawley-Smoot rates.

This being true, how far is the party to reward the expectations of voters that it is to function in opposition to the status quo?

No finer test of the party's faith could be imagined. It is a vital question, one that the Democrats must pull themselves together and face.

Where do they stand?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Reader Tells of Bus Company's Invasion of Neighborhood of Historic Shrine.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: More and more I am convinced that we are living in an age when the people look only on the material side of life. Greed for money crushes down to earth all the landmarks and shrines which our fathers gave us. We have an example in the proposed bus terminal in New York avenue. The bus company has petitioned the Public Utilities Commission for this location, and their plea has been granted. The famous New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, a shrine for over 130 years, opposed the bus company in vain. This old sanctuary, in which Lafayette bade farewell to the American people and in which Lincoln worshiped, now will be violated by militant commercialism. I hope the Rev. Dr. Sizoo and the church trustees will yet win their fight to protect their house of God against the bus nuisance.

Mr. Borglum Says Smith's Debt "Cure-All" Was Submitted to President Hoover Months Ago.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was with considerable gratification, though with some surprise, that I read Al Smith's speech as reported in your paper, advancing the idea "that we build up our foreign trade, that we forget the eleven billion-dollar war debt by crediting all foreign nations (in our debt) buyers of our goods 25 cents on every dollar of American goods purchased."

The joke on Al's bold, thundering cure-all is in advancing it as his own. The identical plan in detail, so accurate that one wonders how it leaked, has been in President Hoover's hands and under consideration for the past two months, suggested to him by a South Dakota Republican. I agree with Mr. Smith that that measure alone, properly developed, would "smash the depression."

Another Correspondent Claims Invention of All Smith's War Debt Plan.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Due to the fact that former Gov. Alfred E. Smith is being credited in his Jefferson Day speech with bringing out an entirely new plan for the handling of the war debts, I herewith inclose a copy of a letter written last December and sent to the Magazine of Wall Street at that time. This letter was published in their issue of February 6, and if a comparison is made with Gov. Smith's speech in regard to war debt concessions, the similarity is very apparent.

The object of this letter is to bring out the fact that this plan, regardless of its merits or faults, is Gov. Smith's by adoption, and that the public is entitled to know of this fact.

It is things of this kind that show the public what they should know, and you are in a place where the members of Congress will be sure to read your articles. The public has been misinformed on the subject of Government employes' pay cut.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENTS.

"An important announcement is coming!
Wait for it!" is shouted at me.
"When we've done with the play,
we'll have something to say
And a startling surprise it will be."
"Turn it off," I declare, "on this radio game
Of important announcements I'm fed.
They will offer the face of some tenor or bass
For the wrappers that come with their bread.

"An important announcement!" it rings on the air
As solemn as Trinity's chimes,
"Be patient and brave, and hang on to the wave!"
As they strive for our nickels and dimes.
"We've an offer to make that will startle the land,
Be sure that you share in our plans,"
But I can not be brave, for I'm not one to save
The labels that come 'round the cans.

An important announcement is coming, I'm told,
But somehow this leaves me unstirred.
I don't sit and stare on the edge of my chair
Awaiting this blood-tingling word.
It may be important to radio men
That samples of toothpaste are free
And for labels on spice you will get something nice,
But it isn't important to me!

GIANT FLYING BOAT ARRIVES IN CAPITAL

Ship Makes 435-Mile Trip From Buffalo in 3 Hours and 15 Minutes.

Completing a difficult 435-mile flight over the mountains, a Consolidated Flying Boat, the largest ship of its type ever delivered to the Navy, arrived yesterday afternoon at the Naval Air Station at Anacostia.

The huge ship, designated XP2Y-1, has a wing spread of 100 feet and is powered with three "Cyclone" engines producing 1,800 horsepower. It is of all-metal construction.

Although designed primarily for use over the water, the plane not being equipped with landing gear, a considerable part of the flight was made over land area.

The ship was flown here by W. B. Wheatly and Clinton Warner. Lawrence Bell, president of the Consolidated Co., and Lieut. Frank Bridget, U. S. N., assistant naval inspector at the Consolidated plant, were passengers. The party left Buffalo yesterday morning at 9:45 o'clock and arrived here at 1 p. m.

The plane is the first of a production order of 23 similar seaplanes which will be assigned to the operating units of the Navy's fighting forces. It is expected that this model plane will soon be developed into a commercial model and as such would be capable of carrying approximately 45 passengers.

A large crowd went to the Naval Air Station yesterday to see the plane which is anchored offshore in the river. The ship will remain here for several weeks undergoing final tests by the Navy and will be inspected by Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, and other Navy officials tomorrow.

DIAL FLASHES

By ROBERT D. HEINL

SIGNIFICANT in the warning which Representative Edwin L. Davis, of Tennessee, House radio leader, gave to the radio advertising agents, was when shaking his finger—and looking for all the world like the late Champ Clark—he said:

"I urge you to correct the objectionable sales talks over the radio before the point is reached where the public will not be satisfied with a correction but will demand the use of a guillotine instead of a pruning knife."

Representative Davis declared that advertising conditions on the air instead of becoming better are steadily growing worse.

"I think that much of the advertising on the radio is now overdone—to such an extent that it has the opposite effect from that sought by the advertiser," Judge Davis continued. "The purpose of radio advertising is to build good will. When it creates ill will, as I am sure much of it is doing now, it has the opposite effect. There is a very general expression of disgust on all sides on the part of the radio audience. The radio advertisers are killing the goose that lays the golden egg."

Representative Davis said that he hadn't a great deal of faith that it is possible for the industry itself to entirely eradicate the "excessive amount of sales talk" over the radio.

Even if a large majority of advertisers are disposed to cut down sales arguments there will certainly always be a considerable element which would persist in excessive amounts of sales talks. We are going to be confronted with a governmental solution of the situation and not at a distant date unless something is done about present practices."

"RADIO advertising is under a severe attack from a number of sources," Senator C. C. Dill, of Washington, coauthor of the radio act, declared in addressing the gathering which was said to represent four-fifths of the radio advertisers of the country.

"One source is the newspaper. The newspaper fights radio advertising because it believes there is a conflict between newspaper advertising and radio advertising," Senator Dill went on. Educational forces of the country are fighting radio advertising. They want better facilities for broadcasting educational programs now possessed by advertising programs. The third group fighting radio advertising is the reform group—people not particularly interested in radio, but looking for something to reform."

"I agree with Senator Dill that certain factors are making a crusade against advertising over the radio," Representative Davis replied. "I have in mind a more powerful factor, however, than those he mentioned. I refer to the rank and file of the listeners as being against the present excessive amount of objectionable radio advertising."

"With all the talk and the many articles published regarding child welfare, I am surprised to note that no encouragement is given to the work being done little listeners over WJSV by some one calling himself the 'Ambassador from Fairyland,'" H. F. Buchholz writes.

"The little stories given the children are listened to with great interest because of their novelty—us older listeners discover not only an educational value in them, but a most pleasant way of teaching moral lessons."

HANS KINDLER, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra, proved himself to be a forceful radio speaker. Mr. Kindler made two things very clear. The first was, suggested by the substantial encouragement given by William J. Turner, vice president of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, and more recently by Mrs. Hugh Dillman, vice president of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, that Mr. Kindler is working along very definite and logical lines in endeavoring to build up a really national organization which will not only be a credit to the Capital, but in larger sense to the Nation itself.

The second thing Mr. Kindler emphasized was that contributions, however small, from all who are able to assist, would be welcome. The average person is apt to think of such an ambitious undertaking as the Symphony Orchestra in the terms of thousands of dollars with rich benefactors furnishing the guarantee.

This is not true in the case of the Washington orchestra and in the long run, it will be far better to have a large number of small contributors than to have the project supported by comparatively few.

Mr. Kindler will again be heard tomorrow night (WMAL, 7:30), in the program of Joseph D. Kaufman.

BY a two-to-one vote the affirmative side of a debate at Western High School on "Resolved, That the British System of Radio Broadcasting Be Adopted in this Country," won. The vote was cast in favor of the affirmative not because of the favor of the subject, but because of the "ludicity" of the argument. The affirmative team consisted of Paul Waldron, Philip Lauman and Donald W. Lamm. The negative team comprised Karl Dieffenbach, Harry Burgess and Hal Claggett.

SEVERAL entrants in The Washington Post-RCA-Victor recording contest will be heard over Station WOL at 5:45 o'clock this afternoon. The contestants whose records will be broadcast today have been chosen at random and their selection will have no bearing upon the selections of prize winners.

One Government official, at least, is practicing economy. This official recently addressed a radio gathering. At its conclusion a newspaper man asked him for a copy of his speech.

"I can't give it to you," the speaker replied, "because I am going to try to sell it to a magazine. Anyway, I have delivered this same radio address two or three times already."

The title of the dissertation was "The Ideal Radio Speech."

THE Battle of San Jacinto, in which Sam Houston led his Texan troops to victory over Santa Ana's troops and won independence for Texas, will be commemorated tonight in the Parade of the States (WRC, 9:30). The program will be dedicated to Texas.

The "Follies of the Air," now heard Sunday nights at 8 o'clock over WMAL, will shift to 10:30 o'clock when daylight saving becomes effective on April 24. With the new time schedule it is believed that the 8 o'clock program in the East would reach the West too early. Ernest Hutcheson, pianist, will move from 10:30 to 8 o'clock.

THE National Committee on Education by Radio, in a current issue of its bulletin makes the following reference to some of those who were formerly connected with the Federal Radio Commission:

"William Howard Taft, according to Mark Sullivan, had accumulated no private means when he left the Presidency. It was open to him and he was solicited to unite with some of the greatest law firms in New York. Taft declined. He said that as President it had happened to fall to him to appoint about 60 per cent of all the district, circuit, and Supreme Court justices on the United States bench. He could not, he said, appear before his own appointees as an advocate in private litigation. And he accepted the small remuneration of a teacher at Yale University."

"This action is in striking contrast to the former members and employes of the Federal Radio Commission who have taken positions with the radio monopolies which they had previously been obliged to deal with as members of the commission, thus placing themselves in a situation where the information they gained as public servants may be used for private advantage contrary to the public interest."

The Washington Police Department short-wave radio station has asked for an increase in its power to 400 watts.

THE first international broadcast ever made from Palestine, postponed from yesterday, will go on the air on May 1, the New York headquarters of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem has announced. The broadcast is to take place at 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., Eastern daylight saving time, over the network of the National Broadcasting Co. The program will include addresses by Sir Herbert Samuel, British home secretary; Oscar Wassermann, member of the board of the Deutsche Bank of Berlin; Dr. Thomas Mann, Noble prize winner in 1929; Israel Levi, chief rabbi of France, and James A. de Rothschild, member of Parliament.

Members of all "Y" clubs and other organized groups in the association will attend the banquet and representatives of these groups will outline the varied activities of the membership.

Mrs. Joseph Saunders, president of the congress, will preside.

Tomorrow evening 6:30 o'clock, the convention dinner will be held in the dining room of the Interior Department. Following the dinner, a series of tableaux presenting the objectives of the Parent-Teacher groups will be portrayed.

Mrs. Oliver Bowles is the convention chairman, and Mrs. Fletcher Sheffield is acting as her assistant. Delegates may register for the meetings from 9 to 10 a. m. tomorrow and Wednesday, and from 3 to 4 p. m. Wednesday. Election of officers will be held at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning.

How to Be Beautiful

By ELSIE PIERCE

This is the first of a series of articles on the importance of beauty for every woman. In every walk of life. Elsie Pierce feels that every woman, regardless of her work or calling, can arrange a beauty program and follow it daily. Study the hints given here and write to Miss Pierce in care of this paper if you have any beauty problems.

Beauty and the Social Leader

IT all started innocently enough, as all discussions do. The speaker did not realize that several members of the group were actively engaged in beauty work. Her statement that in her opinion too much emphasis was being placed on beauty started something. She was soon convinced that beauty is not only naturally desired by every woman, but actually plays a very important part in her life.

Elsie Pierce.

Let us take the social leader, for instance. She is perhaps the most admired and envied of all American women. Constantly busy, "on the go," her calendar is crowded with social engagements, with work for charity organizations, with running a household and a thousand other duties. Wherever she is, whatever she is doing, she always manages to look fit—as smart and well-groomed, as beautiful on the Rue de la Paix as on Park avenue as she does in her fishing slicker at a Canadian camp or hunting outfit in the wilds of some far off woods.

Health Taken for Granted.

I can hear someone saying: "Ah, but she has money, position, clothes." Yes, our social leader appreciates that clothes that are chic and appropriate are important, but more than that she realizes the importance of caring for her beauty and her health.

Good health is taken for granted. Look into the life of our most prominent social leaders and you will find that a program of health and beauty is diligently followed. Outdoor sports are another reason for the social leader's splendid physique. Not only tennis and swimming but fishing, sea angling from rock-bound coasts, even hunting in Africa—our social leader excels in all of these, and as for golf there are no golf widows today, because women keep up with their husbands. Yes, outdoor sports, plenty of fresh air, sunshine and exercise all rolled into one, form a big reason why the social leader is such a splendid specimen of health.

Another reason, and one which many do not suspect is the fact that our social leader builds up a fund of reserve energy, she follows a very balanced mode of living. That is why she can stay up until the wee small hours quite frequently, without showing the strain, why she can crowd her days with receptions, teas, bridges and welfare work. Because between times she gets plenty of rest and sleep.

Above all, she guards against all tell-tale signs of age, neglect or strain, employing the necessary aids to keep youth and beauty always with her. At no time is beauty sacrificed to social engagements. And need you ask how important beauty is in the life of the social leader? Would she be half as envied, admired and emulated if she were not lovely—always? The answer is too obvious.

Interpreting the Mode

By DARE

Delightful spring ensemble from Molyneaux, Paris, in gray cloth with white scarf, dotted red, and stitching.

NEW YORK, April 17.—Spring is synonomous with suits! Whether you are addicted to suits or not, whether you are the tailleur type or not, at least one suit you really should have!

For the style of the thing, not to mention the chic and the undeniable flattery the a suit gives to any figure, any age, for any occasion. Of course, not the same suit by any means. In fact, 'tis this very thing that I want to remind you about today!

That a "suit" means a range as long as the alphabet in style, line, color, material—oh, everything. And when you decide to have or to wear a suit, you must be sure that this suit is your type of suit. Silhouettes vary so in suits—long and slender suits, perkey and flarey-out suits, high-waisted suits, suits that seem to have no waist at all. And your suit is one of these—the lines or type that best suits your figure. So be sure to shop around a good bit for a suit, and don't be misguided by anyone. You know what lines suit you best—follow them, especially in suits.

Evening suits, that new Sunday night idea, are no exception. Whether these are of peau d' ange or lace, spangles or jah-may, suits they are, with all the variations that any other suits have. Select one, not for its cut or color or fabric, but for its lines—in relation to your own!

For the lines of a suit will make you or break you, my deah, especially "rear approach." You've seen them on other women—so please don't make the same errors! And if you take care of this line business, then the flattering and youthful and gayly fresh effects of the waists blouses, gilets, vestees, fischus, jabots, or whatever you wear with them, will give you a hundred per cent of their assistance—which these things have plenty of, if you see what I mean.

* * * *

And the nightgowns Dah-ray designed and tells you how to make in this week's leaflet has plenty of—it, them, these AN' those! Not to mention the ease with which they are made, and laundered—clever fingers make either of these stunning nightgowns in half an hour, and launder them in fifteen minutes!

Yes, they are picot materials, sewn together in certain ways, new ways that Dare has never told you about before. And they are more flattering to the figure than all of her handmade Parisian nighties put together—in fact, the latter are safely put away in sandlewood boxes, and the new nightgowns Dah-ray tells you how to make for yourself are what she is wearing now herself. Better send for the leaflet to the Dare Department, The Washington Post, and see! How to make them, silly, not Dare in 'em!

* * * *

A Molyneux ensemble of typical elegance and restraint—gray material, and white and red-dotted scarf—as simple as that! But with the magic Molyneux touch. * * * I sketched it for you today.

* * * *

Fashion French.

"Molyneux" is an Englishman, but since he is famous as a Parisian couturier, and one of the five "Haute," better pronounce it as they do there —"Moil-e-nuh." The last syllable is difficult to describe—it isn't exactly "nuh," but about that if the "u" was an "e," too. "Neuh" might help.

FRENCH OMELET WITH MUSHROOMS AND BEEF HASH.

SHORT ribs of beef were the order of the day yesterday. Are there odds and ends of this meat left on the larder shelf, I wonder? If so, it's a bit late to think about them now for tonight's supper, and in any event one can grow tired of even a good thing, so let us postpone any thought of a made-over beef dish until tomorrow and then—a good old-fashioned beef hash! How about it?

But if no plans are made for tonight, will an omelet serve a last-minute purpose? An onion omelet or one with mushrooms or perhaps one with cheese to tempt a blue Monday appetite. Here then is our French omelet with mushroom recipe; onions or cheese may be substituted at your discretion. With this is a salad, crackers and cheese and something hot to drink will constitute a very nourishing supper.

French Omelet With Mushrooms.

5 eggs—beaten
4 tablespoonfuls milk
Salt and pepper
¼ pound mushrooms—cut in small pieces
2 tablespoonfuls butter
1 clove garlic

Beat eggs, add milk, salt and pepper. Heat one tablespoonful butter in frying pan wiped with garlic clove. Saute the mushrooms in the butter, add the egg mixtures and cook slowly, lifting bottom of omelet with flexible knife as it cooks, until of desired consistency. Serve at once.

TUESDAY'S DINNER.

Spring Vegetable Soup
Roast Beef Hash
French Fried Eggplant
Cereal Pudding with Sherry Sauce
Coffee

Spring Vegetable Soup.

1½ quarts soup stock
1-3 cupful string beans
1-3 cupful turnips
1-3 cupful carrots
½ cupful peas (canned or fresh)
2 tablespoonfus onion

Cut the carrots, turnips and string beans in thin trips. Cook, together with the peas, in boiling salted water to cover, adding water during the cooking to keep the vegetables covered. When tender, add them, together with liquid, to the stock. Heat to the boiling point, add additional salt and paprika to taste, and serve with croutons.

Roast Beef Hash.

Place a tablespoonful of butter in an iron frying pan and add to it one green pepper, chopped fine; one minced clove of garlic, if desired, and one-half teaspoonful of salt mixed with one-third teaspoonful of pepper. Cook until nearly tender. Remove all fat, put meat through grinder or chop very fine and add to frying pan. Brown the meat slightly, turning it constantly. Reduce heat, add sufficient water to moisten the hash well and cover closely. Simmer for a half hour or until the water has somewhat evaporated, leaving the hash of the proper consistency to serve. Cooked potatoes may be added, or, if desired, raw potatoes cut in small pieces and cooked with the hash.

Cereal Pudding With Sherry Sauce.

1 pint milk
½ cupful granulated cereal
¼ teaspoonful salt
1-3 cupful powdered sugar
2 eggs, slightly beaten
½ teaspoonful vanilla

Scald the milk. Add the cereal and stir. Stir constantly for five minutes. Cook in double boiler for twenty-five minutes. Set aside until cool, then add sugar, eggs and vanilla and stir well. Butter and sprinkle small molds with sugar. Fill with the mixture. Set in pan of hot water. Bake in moderate oven (325 degrees) for thirty-five minutes. Serve with sherry sauce.

Sherry Sauce.

1 tablespoonful butter
2 tablespoonfuls flour
1½ cupfuls boiling water
2 tablespoonfuls sugar
½ cupful nonalcoholic sherry flavoring
¼ teaspoonful salt

Melt the butter, stir in the flour and, when thoroughly blended, add the water and sugar. Cook, stirring constantly, for ten minutes. Remove from fire, add sherry flavoring and salt. Serve hot.

THE WEIGHT GUIDE.

For individual assistance, write to Nancy Carey, sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope and give age, weight, height and habits of life.

Answers to Readers.

Dear Miss Carey: Words cannot express how grateful I am to you for your advice. I have reduced to 136 pounds and look so much better. What I want to know now is how can I remain there? I don't want to go under 135 and, while I know what to eat to reduce, I am afraid of becoming too much underweight. MRS. H. H.

I don't blame you for your concern, Mrs. H. H., and I want to tell you how glad I am to know of your success. It isn't going to be at all difficult to keep at the weight you have attained now that you have acquired a knowledge of food values and combinations and, what is most important, an appetite completely under control. The first thing to do in planning a diet to keep your weight constant is to figure your own vital needs. Once this is done your problem is practically solved and you need never be fat again. You will be able to eat healthful, satisfying meals and keep your new figure at the same time. One couldn't ask for much more, after all, now could one?

We require daily a certain number of calories to maintain our health and vitality. If we exceed that number, we become fat and rotund. If we fall below it, we lose weight and fall heir to many possible ills. To find out how many calories you need daily, multiply your normal weight by fifteen. This will give you the approximate number required to keep your weight constant. As for the actual foods and menu planning, this will be largely up to each individual. It would be rather difficult to plan a set of menus to last you forever, but if you will just be careful to supply your vital needs, you may then add whatever foods you like best. Should you lose weight on your allowance just eat more of these foods. If you should like, and will send us a self-addressed, stamped envelope, we shall be very glad to tell you what foods are necessary for your so-called "vital needs" and to help you further at any time.

Use Your Leftovers

Appetizing additions to the daily menu are easily contrived by proper preparation of "leftover" foods. Hash is not the only by-product of the roast and dainty desserts can be made from the breakfast cereal. Just send for the folder, "Appetizing Suggestions for Leftovers," that gives many practical suggestions and tested recipes. All that is necessary is a self-addressed, stamped envelope and your request, sent to

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

EARLY DIAGNOSIS OF MEASLES.

A FEW days ago we told of a line on the inner surface of the lower eyelid, about a quarter of an inch from the border. This is an easily seen symptom of measles which appears about three days before the eruption. On the second day before the eruption the red line has been changed to a red band of swelling, and the loose folds of the membrane are showing evidence of swelling.

Another very easy sign, but one that is not so easily seen, is what is known as Koplik's spots. To observe these, the child stands in a good light before an open window. The mother, or teacher, takes her position with her back to the light. The child opens his mouth widely, and the observer looks for small spots about the size of a split pea. They may appear bluish or reddish, and they have a tiny, whitish central area.

These spots are not much swollen, nor are they uniform as to color, nor do they stand out like a vaccination on an arm; but, viewed by a good light, they are enough different from the surrounding tissues to be readily seen. The best place to look for them is on the inner surfaces of the cheeks, but the search should extend to other parts of the mouth and also to the eyes. Occasionally one or more of these spots can be seen on the inner surface of the lower lid and around the swollen inner corner.

These spots and the eye signs described in the earlier article show before the eruption appears and when there is not much else to cause suspicion of measles.

There is another very early sign and, equipped as so many homes now are, it is not a difficult one to notice. A mild fever precedes the eruption, and even precedes the stage of considerable discomfort by a day or more. This is a sign that the Army put great dependence on when measles appears in a recruit camp. They take the temperatures of all persons under suspicion several times a day. A mild fever that is not otherwise easily explained, appearing when measles is around, is held to be a sign of trouble due in one or two days. This fever, which goes before measles, is somewhat like that of malaria in that it comes and goes. Therefore, if the temperature is not taken several times daily, and recorded, the fever may be missed. The fevers of the early stage of smallpox, infantile paralysis, dengue, and some other diseases has this come and go quickly. If, perchance, a child is isolated on suspicion of measles, and it proves to be a false alarm, no great harm has been done.

Another guidepost of great value, when it is the point, is a history of exposure within ten days. If measles is known to be around, and there is a suspicion of exposure within ten days, the eye symptoms described in the previous article, and the mouth spots and fever described today are very suggestive. If measles is to be controlled, action must be taken in these suspicious symptoms. When the child becomes definitely sick with a dry cough, the eyes are red and weeping, the eruption is appearing, and the body is filled with aches and pains, there is no trouble in knowing what the disease is. But what's the use of locking the stable door if the horse has been gone for three days?

It is for this reason that we say the control of measles lies with parents and teachers. Health departments and physicians are standing on the sidelines.

MIGRAINE.

L. McG. writes: Can migraine be cured. My mother has had attacks about twice a year for years. She stays in bed two or three days and vomits. We have tried to cure her in several ways. When physicians can cure cancer and when radium is so useful, why is migraine a sticker?

REPLY.

Some cases of migraine are cured. Many are not. In some the disease is spontaneously cured at a certain time of life, or the habit changes.

There are several kinds of migraine, and what cures one kind may do no good, or may even do harm in another. Many hold that those cases in which vomiting is an important symptom are, due to some form of food sensitization, and should be treated along that line.

WORM IN STOMACH.

M. B. writes: Is the human intestinal worm harmful to the stomach? If so, how to get rid of it?

REPLY.

There are several kinds of worms that are at home in the human digestive canal. Rarely does any worm get into the stomach, however, and when one does he promptly gets out, or tries hard to do so and, failing, dies. The stomach can stand the worm far better than the worm can stand the stomach.

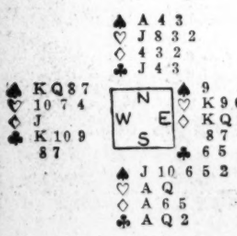
Playing a Poor Hand Well.

CONTRACT bridge has this in common with life: We can not always get the things we want; but we can, in bridge or in life, make the best of even bad situations. The person who gets the most out of life is not always the one most favored with natural advantages. So, too, 'n Bridge. If Contract were only a game of bidding for games and Slams and then laying down Aces and Kings and witnessing the realization of the predictions you made in bidding, it would become a tremendous bore to those who now find in it mental relaxation and intellectual recreation.

Thus, the bad hands and those which present particular difficulties in the play are the ones that linger in our memories, particularly if we have utilized to the utmost every opportunity of play which the cards offered. The hand below, played in a New York bridge club 'n a rubber game recently, gave to the holder of the South cards an opportunity for a number of unusual plays, such as ordinarily would not take place in an entire evening. These plays involved an atomatic strip of the cards in one suit from the hand most feared in the leading; second, a throw-in of the same hand; third, an early end-play situation; fourth, another strip, eliminating the second suit from his hand; fifth, the theft of a trick by a deceptive lead, and, last, another end-play.

South—Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The Bidding.

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
1♠(1)	2♣(2)	Pass	2◇(3)
Dbl.(4)	Pass	2♠(5)	3◇
3♠(6)	Dbl.(7)	Pass	Pass
Pass

1—A second Opening bid, containing more than 4 honor-tricks. The choice of the shaded spade suit is better than the bid of no-trump.
2—West is willing for South to play the hand in spades, but injects the club bid for the purpose of making the North and South bidding as difficult as possible.
3—East has a sound Overcall.
4—A Takeout Double.
5—North can do nothing but raise partner's bid, in response to the Force.
6—An overbid.
7—Inasmuch as partner had bid and rebid diamonds, West, holding 2 trump tricks and a probable club trick, feels justified in making a Penalty Double.

West opened the singleton diamond, and it was obvious, when the Dummy went down, that East held six diamonds, otherwise he would not have rebid, in view of West's Double, with his probable lack of honor strength. South won with the Ace and then led the Knave of spades. West played the Queen and was permitted to hold the trick, as South felt sure that he could not lead another diamond. The choice of a lead to the third trick was difficult, but West decided to shift to a heart, the Ten. To this trick the 2 was played from Dummy. East played the 6 and South won with the Queen. South now led the heart Ace, West played the 7, North the 3 and East the 5. South's problem was to keep the lead in West's hand, while West was anxious to throw the lead to his partner. Therefore, to Trick 5 South led the 2 of clubs, and West, hoping that his partner might hold the Queen or the Ace, played the 7 of clubs, and the trick was won with the Knave of clubs in Dummy. The 8 of hearts was now led from the Dummy and South trumped with the 2 of spades. This completed the elimination of the second suit from West's hand. South now led the 5 of spades, West played the 7, and the trick was won with the Ace in Dummy. A spade was returned and West won the spade 6 with the 8 and then led the King, taking South's last trump, but he was then compelled to concede two club tricks to the South player, due to the careful elimination of exit cards from the West hand. The contract was defeated one trick, but the defeat would have been much more severe were it not for the careful play by the Declarer.

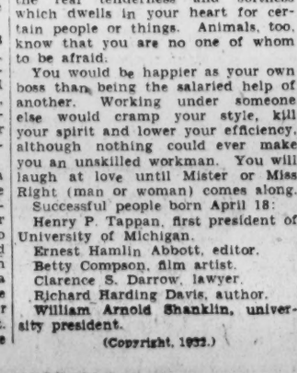
TODAY'S POINTER.

Success in Bridge does not necessarily require the holding of good hands, but it does require the playing of poor hands well.

TOMORROW'S HAND.

The bidding and play of the hand printed below will be discussed tomorrow:

East—Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



Study the hand, decide how you would bid and play it and then compare the results you obtain with those shown in tomorrow's article.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES McDONALD

Benighted Parents.

DEAR Frances McDonald: I am a constant reader of your column. I am writing this letter hoping I may get some real advice from you and your readers. I am a young woman 25 years of age. I am tall and well-built, considered nice looking. I have been married seven years and they have been seven years of trouble. Before my marriage I never was allowed to go out, because my parents do not believe in movies, dances or cards. I met a young man at our church studying to be a minister. My mother took a liking to him at once and she thought he was just the person for me. I never cared a whole lot for him, much less loved him, but I finally married him to please mother. He came from a fairly well-to-do family, but his father was stingy and never gave him much money. When we got married my mother gave him $100 to finish school. He then got a position as school teacher. Then our little girl was born. A year after the baby was born he got a charge to preach in a little town 8 miles away. He got a machine and it was not long before he was asked to resign from teaching school on account of his conduct with his girl pupils. He soon got in with one girl at his church and everybody turned against him and he was asked to resign.

I left him and took my baby and went home. It was not long before he came around and talked to mother and she thought it was best that we live together again, so we tried it and in a year's time had a baby boy. He has had several jobs since and has been so dishonest that he was thrown out of all of them. He never as much as bought me a pair of shoes since I have been married. My mother still takes up for him and turns me down. We all live at home and it is so miserable I hardly know what to do. My sister does not come home any more because they treat her just as they do me. They are getting so hateful that if I read to the children at night they growl until I turn out the light. He runs around every night and when they ask him where he goes he says either church or lodge. I know that is not true as I have caught him out with other women in my father's car. When I tell it at home they do not believe it. When I want to go away I must be home at 10 o'clock or they will lock the door on me. They give him a key. I am sorry this letter got so long but my heart is so full I hardly know what to do. I sure would appreciate some advice from anybody. DISCOURAGED.

If you are the intelligent girl you seem, you must realize that your parents are steeped in ignorance and intolerance. That being the case your course is to make allowance for what they can not help. Benighted as they are, they would suffer anything rather than admit that they were wrong. They will support this man for life rather than say that they were mistaken. They wanted a minister for a son-in-law. To them there was prestige in that. They have learned that rogues can enter the ministry just as burglars can enter a house. But the density of the ignorance that engulfs them renders it impossible for them to frankly acknowledge that they were fooled. Believe that, and forgive them.

But you are a person, not a chattel. So knowing the depravity of this man you are very wrong in living with him. Tell your people that if they wish to have him in their home, to justify their past judgment, they may do so, but he will be only a boarder to you. You have no right to have children by a man who is a menace to the social order, a hypocrite and an imposter. Take your stand. And refuse to move from it.

Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

WHEN PLANTING LILIES.

EVERY garden must have at least a few lilies. Most lilies are quite hardy, though some require care, especially the first season.

As a rule lilies are not very demanding. If you give them a rich, light soil they will be quite happy. You must never attempt to grow them in soil which has been freshly manured. They do best in a loam where there are plenty of rotted leaves such as you find in leafmold. Sand placed beneath the bulbs will prevent injury by insects and give perfect drainage.

They always do well in a location where their tops are in the sun a few hours a day, but where their roots are in the shade. As a rule most shrubbery borders afford them the proper amount of sun and shade.

Lilies should be set out early in the season. The stem-rooting varieties like the L. auratum and the L. speciosum rubrum must be planted deeply. Set such bulbs 8 inches deep and cover them with a mulch. Some growers complain that the Japanese stem-rooting lilies dwindle to nothingness after blooming well the first season. This is usually due to exhaustion. You see, when the bulbs are prepared for shipment some of the feeding roots are sure to be destroyed. This lowers the vitality of the bulbs. Then they flower the first year rather profusely, which is also a drain on their vitality. Most authorities recommend preventing the bulbs from flowering the first year. They usually establish themselves and will then bloom for many years.

All lilies are gross feeders, so for this reason it is wise to lift the bulbs from time to time. When resetting them be sure to use plenty of leafmold or some bonemeal.

The Madonna is one of our well-known lilies that resents deep planting. This is an extremely hardy variety, so it is not necessary to cover it with more than 3 or 4 inches of soil.

If you are planning to add some lilies to your garden this spring, be sure to plant some bulbs of regale and some of L. henryi. Do not forget that all lilies are moisture-loving plants, so keep them well watered in midsummer. Lilies are rarely troubled with insects, which makes them desirable.

What Today Means

By MARY BLAKE

"ARIES."

IF April 18 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a. m. to noon, from 4 p. m. to 5 p. m., and from 7:30 p. m. to 9 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:15 a. m. to 9:30 a. m., and from 2 p. m. to 3:30 p. m.

There are only minor astrological indications for April 18, and life will probably slip forward in its usual grooves with little change in thought or action. Your role will be that of a disinterested onlooker, rather than that of a more active player inside the game of life.

The child born on this April 18 will not be an athletic, sporty type, and if a girl, will especially be old-fashioned and domestic. The April 18 boy will be a straight-backed, sturdy and upright, and a most dependable, likable little man. Their complete horoscope is a very pleasing one.

Born on April 18, you have a brusque, impulsive, forceful nature and plunge into things with no preamble. Once having made up your mind, you dismiss all thoughts to the contrary with dispatch and finality, pursuing your chosen path to either a glorious success or a courageous failure. You have the sense and grit to grapple with your ordeals face to face and on the spot. You would rather put up with the bad taste of a drastic remedy as a cure for some disturbing element than to chronically poison your system through harboring bad memories from a distance.

You do a lot of grouching and grumbling, which is seldom symptomatic of anything more radical than letting off steam. It is your safety valve and your associates soon realize that yours is a harmless bark. If you be a man you are afraid of being thought weak to show sentimentality, but no mask can conceal the real tenderness and softness which dwells in your heart for certain people or things. Animals, too, know that you are no one of whom to be afraid.

You would be happier as your own boss than being the salaried help of another. Working under someone else would cramp your style, kill your spirit and lower your efficiency, although nothing could ever make you an unskilled workman. You will laugh at love until Mister or Miss Right (man or woman) comes along.

THE GARBLE SISTERS.

"I SEE by the papers that Congress is questioning Clarence Darrow again on the bear market operations."

"Yeah. They got a letter from the American Legion saying there was a big plot for a Black Saturday or something on the Stock Exchange as a protest against the bonus."

"This fellow Darrow is too smart for them. They didn't reelect him president of the Stock Exchange for nothing."

"Wasn't he the man that bid 150 for Telephone in the panic?"

"That was Eli Whitney."

"I think it's a shame the way people are being ruined in the stock market. Pat Hurley was right."

"About what?"

"He came out with a statement that the United States should give Wall street back its independence in eight years."

"We should never have tried to run it in the first place."

* * * *

"WHAT do you think about the bonus?"

"I agree with what Mrs. Fortesque says."

"What was that?"

"I can't quite give you all the details, but practically what she said and Senator Walcott said was that the war veterans should be paid by a loan through the Reconstruction Corporation."

"What's the Reconstruction Corporation?"

"It's headed by Secretary Stimson and has something to do with balancing the budget."

"They would have balanced the budget long ago if it hadn't been for that congressman that made all the trouble. What was his name?"

"Jafsie."

"That's the feller. He wanted to get the country out of debt by putting a tax on light wines and beers and consolidating the Navy Department with Pat Hurley."

"Didn't some European country give up prohibition the other day after a long test?"

"Sure. It was Germany. They had to have two elections to do it. The first one wasn't decisive and so they had a run-off."

"Who won?"

"Eamon de Valera, and he refused to take the oath of allegiance or pay land taxes."

"Why?"

"He said the church and state should be kept separate and that a tax on stock transfers would ruin the brokers."

"What do you think about business? Is it picking up?"

"They say President Hoover made a discovery the other day that may revolutionize industry."

"Vitamin C, you mean?"

"I guess that was it."

Los Angeles, April 17 (A.P.).—Elva McGuinness, 19, continued dancing as a chorus girl in a cafe today, despite notification that she had just inherited $75,000. ARLINGTON'S CLERK GETS NEW COUNSEL

Crounse and Harlow Will Appear for Duncan in Place of Mackay.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 309. Clarendon, Va.

It was revealed last night that Attorneys Amos C. Crounse and Leo Harlow, of Alexandria, will appear in the Circuit Court of Arlington County as counsel for County Clerk William H. Duncan.

Duncan, in addition to being held for the grand jury on charges of grand larceny of public funds, must answer a rule issued by Judge Walter T. McCarthy to show cause why his bond of $8,000 as county clerk should not be increased.

Capt. Crandal Mackey, former Commonwealth's attorney, withdrew as counsel for Duncan several days ago.

To aid in a determined effort to return Arlington County to the Democratic column in the presidential election this fall, the Arlington County Woman's Democratic Club, was organized at Clarendon with Mrs. Catherine M. Committee appointments to carry on the activities of the club will be announced at an early date. Plans were laid at the meeting for a series of public meetings beginning soon.

Live Stock Rescued By Woman at Fire

Leads Horse and Carries 17 Pigs to Safety in Fairfax Blaze.

Fire of mysterious origin destroyed a tenant house and barn on the Polly Ann farm, near Fairfax Station, yesterday afternoon. The farm is owned by Miss Ludema Sayre, postmistress at Fairfax, Va.

A short time before the fire was discovered Miss Sayre had gone for a walk, and her housekeeper, Mrs. Margaret Cooper, was alone in the main dwelling. It is believed the fire started in the small house which has been vacant for some months and the wind carried the sparks into a haystack along side of the barn. Mrs. Cooper discovered the blaze soon after the barn caught. Rushing into the flaming building she led a horse and carried seventeen small pigs to safety. A calf was burned to death before she could reach it.

Neighbors, who saw the flames, called the Fairfax Fire Department, 5 miles away. Lack of water hindered the firemen's efforts to save the adjoining buildings. The loss was estimated to be about $4,000, partly covered by insurance.

IF an Indian woman of Dutch Guiana wants her husband to give up smoking, all she has to do is have a baby. An impending appearance of the stork is a signal for the expectant father to cease all manual labor or anything else which, in his mind, might harm the child due to be born. He even quits washing, and eats nothing but gruel of cassava. Until the babe has safely arrived, the husband rests comfortably in his hammock, his every need being attended to by the women of the tribe. The mother, in the meantime, has disappeared alone into the woods, and doesn't return until the father has completely recovered.

Even the century- old Chinese eggs cannot begin to compare in value to the last egg that was laid by a great auk. The auk was a diving bird, about the size of a duck, but was unable to fly because of its small wings. It laid only one egg at a time, and the birds as well as their eggs were prized as an article of diet by seafaring folk. In fact, so many auks were sacrificed to satisfy man's palate that the birds have disappeared from the face of the earth, although they once abounded in the region of the North Atlantic. The last great auk egg brought the amazing sum of $25,000.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

IT all seemed remotely—and that is an important word—suggestive of Psyche at the Bath, Pishy at the Pool, Pysitch at the Well, or was that Rebecca?—although please do not gather that I was personally present on either of THOSE days. They were long after my time!

Dorothy Mackaill.

I mean, when Mr. Rodney Collier, very trigly done up in his dinner jacket and highly simonized, led me back to her dressing-room Saturday evening—and about two miles, I should roughly estimate, have been lopped off the subterranean trek that a week earlier had led to the entirely different hutch that was Miss Lilyan Tashman's—Miss Dorothy Mackaill was ardently engaged over a wash bowl in removing the last traces of Prexie Carl Laemmle's Rialto Theater's grime from approximately ten of her extremely well manicured fingers.

"Come right in, sit right down, wait just a minute and I shall be happy to extend you a comparatively dry hand," seem to have been Miss Mackaill's first words. "But in the meantime, the interview might as well get under way. Yes, I have been 'glorified!'"

"You're telling me?" Not polite, but expressive! "Lady, I remember when. It must have been about . . ."

"Exactly; 1923, the last of the 'Midnight Frolics' ever put on at the New Amsterdam Roof in New York, and then the Ziegfeld 'Follies' after that. And when I recently wanted to see 'Hot-Cha!' in New York, what did that precious Flo Ziegfeld do but give me his personally reserved box because there were no other seats to be had in the house. Was that a kick? I ask you."

"Yeah, but going back there—and it is not so far—you must have known some of the playmates of Ed Evans and me, maybe Dolores, Ollie Osborne, Jessie Reed . . ."

"Of course, and the beauty who afterward married Winnie Sheehan, of Fox—what was her name?"

"I can't recall, either."

"Oh, yes; Kay Laurel."

"To be sure. And dear old Victor Kiraly, for years the manager of Billie Burke and between times major domo of the New Amsterdam and the 'Nine o'Clock Revue' and 'Midnight Frolic,' and Art Hickman's band. Now, weren't those the days?"

Really, you know, this sort of thing could have kept up for weeks! And maybe will!

THE handsome young gentleman who has been listening to all this, mind you, is none other than the companionable and gracious Neil Miller, who appears with Miss Mackaill in her act that is packing them in at the Rialto, and, incidentally, is her husband! But, what the dickens! When you get going like this, where are there ever any terminal facilities?

"Then you must remember, too, that amiable editorial gentleman, Robert E. Pritchard, managing editor of William A. Johnston's Motion Picture News about the time you were beginning in pictures?"

"One of the best friends I ever had," replied this charming young English woman, with the first trace of seriousness that had entered our highly intellectual chat. "Poor Bob, as you must remember, went to sleep with a lighted cigaret in his hand and was burned to death in the Hotel Cumberland in New York. He did a tremendous amount toward getting me started in the films out of a pure spirit of friendship that I shall always cherish and never forget."

"Ours was a staunch friendship, too," I replied. "Back in 1919, when I was unimportantly engaged in the promotion of this very theater in which we are sitting, Bob, for no reason at all, devoted a two-page spread in the News to what he deemed important qualities that had crept into our efforts to 'put over' what was then Washington's leading 'Temple of the Muses.' But there was, of course, the pound of flesh! In this instance, it was that as a special deputy press agent I do whatever might be possible to further the professional career before the cameras of one Dorothy Mackaill."

"You wouldn't kid me, would you, mister?"

Recalling a line of Nancy Carroll's in a picture with Gary Cooper, I was able to dig up an especially appropriate wisecrack for this one:

"I would if I could, Lady; I would if I could!"

BUT it happened not to be necessary.

Bob Pritchard had no more than suggested that whatever helpful publicity might be put across in this territory for Miss Mackaill would be advantageous than she came along in the first important feature in which she had appeared up to that time—"Mighty Lak' a Rose." That simplified matters outrageously.

"Anders Randolf was in that one," I suggested, somehow having been struck with the notion that many of the best of the old-timers have departed this life, he among them.

"And Jimmie Rennie," said Dorothy.

"And Eddie Carewe directed," said I.

This, too, could have gone on for weeks. And maybe will!

"But what you don't know is this," quoth the interviewer who was terribly cramping his subject's style in her earnest attempt to arrive in time to be guest of honor at a rout at the Hotel Shoreham, "that 'Mighty Lak' a Rose' had something to do with really getting you somewhere."

Fresh, at that.

"Do you mind if I go on frizzing my hair?"

"Not in the least, hair-frizzing is among the strongest of my weaknesses. But about this 'Mighty Lak' a Rose' business, it was very shortly after we had given a trade showing at the Hotel Washington here, as First National franchise holders in this territory, that I happened to be lunching with Dick Barthelmess, Andy Randolf, William Powell and Percy Marmont in the Lambs Club in New York. This is a long story and I hope it bores you. Dick was looking for a new leading woman. He had just finished 'The Bright Shawl,' in Cuba, with Dorothy Gish, Andy Randolf and Bill Powell, and was contemplating a Cromwellian story for Inspiration in which the leading woman must be a blonde, must masquerade a good deal of the time as a boy and be able to 'take it.' Had I seen you, by any chance? And was Andy excited about his part in 'Mighty Lak' a Rose!' Never having seen it cut and assembled, he was sure he was 'the face on the cutting-room floor.' And you got the job!"

"And will I ever forget it."

"IN 'The Fighting Blade' I was swashbuckled all over the place, don't think I wasn't. If you will pardon my saying so, Dick forgot in a few of the story's more exciting sequences that I really was a girl and when he kicked me out of that barroom. . . ."

"Well, well, and look how late it is and how you must hate me for making you Jimmy Walker at the party."

"But I don't believe you have."

"Well, anyhow, your hair DOES look a lot better, all frizzed and everything!"

"Says you!"

"Says I."

NOT much of an interview from the standpoint of you three readers, perhaps, but a delightful conversation with one of the most disarmingly and engagingly frank young artistes it has ever been my privilege to meet.

And if you must have those dreary facts that clutter up most interviews, Miss Mackaill was born in Hull, England, just so many years ago, and it is not many; began as a typist and, oddly enough, was once employed on a newspaper. Then she came to America, and the rest is vaguely intimated—I hope—hereinabove.

She is a natural blonde, about 5 feet 4½ or 5 inches tall, I should guess—and I am a terrible guesser—weighs somewhere in the general vicinity of 110 or 115 and likes tennis, swimming, dancing and the like—but I should say, more particularly, just living in a world that strikes her as being thoroughly "oke."

It seems to strike Mr. Miller the same way!

THE THEATER

"IRELAND'S ROUGH-HEWN DESTINY." A cinematographic travelogue, from a scenario by Victor A. Haddick; with lecture by Bailey Ross. At the National Theater. Reviewed Sunday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

Travelogues have come and gone in great profusion, but none has achieved that blending of dramatic content with sight and sound quite to the extent of Bailey Ross' "Ireland's Rough-Hewn Destiny." Here are woven together an artistic straight travelogue of Erin, its cities and its country regions with a wealth of natural beauty, and the story of Ireland from the early years with salient historical events reenacted and contrasted with current developments.

Save for a synchronized musical accompaniment and incidental sound effects, the picture is silent. To supplement the screening, Bailey Ross delivers the lecture that easily marks the high point in reading of this type. Cued perfectly with the picture, Mr. Ross describes the three parts of the film with a clarity and an acute sense of timing that borders on the miraculous.

Not only are the pictured scenes by themselves teeming with interest, but Mr. Ross' description is augmented by interpolated scenes from the life of St. Patrick, enacted by the Gate Players of Dublin; and materializations of a few folk tales, interpreted by the Ballet School in Dublin. In passing, it may be mentioned that Geroid O'Lachlainn plays the Christ-like St. Patrick, and Maureen O'Brien symbolizes the Spirit of Erin.

Color, used frequently throughout the film, adds no little to the presentation of the scenic beauties of the Emerald Isle, giving the scenes of the River Lee, Killarney, the road to Tipperary and sunsets off the Connemara Coast new and added significance.

Among the most striking of the developments of the new Ireland is the Shannon Power Scheme, a gigantic hydroelectric development governmentally operated. In contrast, no less striking are the shots of the Round Towers most generally associated with monasteries—a mute, yet eloquent, testimony to the religious fervor of a day gone by. The hills of Donegal, a cross-roads dance, Wicklow, and the cities of Galway, Cork, and Dublin are among the other high points.

ALEXANDRIA SPECIAL MAILINGS ARRANGED

Chamber of Commerce to Aid Stamp Collectors to Get May 12 Cancellations.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The Alexandria Chamber of Commerce has received assurances of the Postoffice Department of its cooperation in arranging special mailings from the Alexandria Postoffice on May 12, in connection with the dedication of the George Washington Masonic National Memorial Temple. The chamber has prepared a cachet depicting the temple and showing the dedication date, for the use of the special mail dispatched through the local office on the date of the celebration.

Stamped, addressed covers to receive the special cachet should be sent under separate wrapper, addressed to the Chamber of Commerce, Alexandria, and indorsed on the face, "For cancellation May 12." The chamber of commerce has asked that the number of covers sent should be restricted to a reasonable quantity, and collectors should not request the return of covers by registered mail.

Attention has also been called to the fact that the 9-cent stamp of the Bicentennial issue bears the likeness of George Washington, modeled from a pastel portrait painted by W. Williams in 1794, the original of which is now in the possession of Alexandria-Washington Lodge of Masons. This is the only painting from life in existence which shows Washington as an old man, with a mustache. The lodge has a standing offer of $100,000 for the original portrait.

Plans have been completed in Alexandria for a general clean up under the direction of Fire Chief James M. Duncan, jr. The work will start today.

The fire chief has asked for volunteers to donate the use of trucks and dump carts. The plans provide for cleaning up every vacant lot in the city, many of which are covered with debris.

The annual meeting of the Retail Merchants Association, Inc., of Alexandria, will be held tomorrow evening, when officers will be elected and delegates chosen to the State convention, to be held in June in Clifton Forge, Va.

Tentative arrangements have been made by the Alexandria Shrine Club for a big ceremonial to be held in the George Washington Masonic Memorial Temple on May 21. At this gathering Most Illustrious Potentate Pendergrast and members of his official divan will be in attendance. Members of Almas Temple, of Washington, have been invited to attend.

The committee in charge includes Joseph H. Kretchmer, general chairman; George W. Zachary, reception; Roger C. Sullivan, parade and band concert; J. Edward Shinn, refreshments; Leonard J. Miller, candidates; Harry H. Newton, arrangements and entertainment, and William H. Meeks, publicity.

22,000 SEE MACKS ROUT MARBERRY, BEAT NATS 11-3

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

IT seemed to this column yesterday afternoon as the Athletics were overpowering the Nats that big George Earnshaw was doing something quite contraventional to the best accepted theory of pitching and hitting percentages.

The best baseball minds have told us for 50 years that right-handed pitchers are not calculated to have an edge on left-handed batters. It seems that an ideal line-up against right-handed pitching is a complete left-handed batting order. On the same theory, a right-handed batting order against left-handed pitching is greatly sought by our best managers, many of whom have substitutes available for that very contingency.

But there was big Earnshaw out there yesterday rending asunder this deep-seated relief about hitting and pitching. Earnshaw, a right-hander of the specie that is supposed to fear left-handed sluggers, proceeded to strike out ten of the left-handers that represent the Nats' concentration of hitting power.

As a matter of fact, as the saying goes, all of Earnshaw's first ten strikeouts were at the expense of left-handed Washington batters. The right-handers in the Nats' line-up escaped him until the seventh inning, but he finally caught up with Joe Cronin and fanned him twice before the game ended.

Mickey Cochrane was calling for Earnshaw's high, fast one most of the afternoon, but the big Mackian pitcher was also throwing an effective change of pace in there, too. After whiffing in the first three or four innings, Myer, Manush, West and Judge were all set for Earnshaw's speed ball and his change of pace found them off balance frequently.

It's a warm day in Little America when Heinie Manush strikes out four times consecutively, but Earnshaw had Herr Heinie at his mercy all afternoon, although the Nats' outfielder protested strenuously at Hildebrand's decisions at the plate. When Hildebrand called the third strike on him in the fifth, the second time it had happened, Manush was in a mood to drive his arguments home to the umpire's chin.

Despite their brace of victories over the Nats, the Athletics appear no stronger than last season, if as strong. Lefty Grove and George Earnshaw give every indication of being as valuable, but Rube Walberg has yet to prove his case this season.

At shortstop the A's have Joe Boley, who wasn't good enough to play regularly last season, and he is a year older. In right field is Roger Cramer, who has supplanted Bing Miller, and he must display much improvement if he is to fill Miller's boots in the same effective manner.

But the A's won the pennant by fifteen games last season and the revised cast of Mr. Mack can play below their 1931 pace and still win the flag by a comfortable margin. With Max Bishop always a menace by his proclivity of coaxing walks and Cochrane, Simmons and Foxx ready to slam the ball out of the lot with men on bases, the Mackmen again will have considerable voice in the disposition of the pennant.

Manager Johnson thus far this season has been betrayed by the hitters of his team. In five games to date the club has gone to bat 174 times and responded with only 35 hits for a team batting average of .201, which is not calculated to keep them in organized baseball if it is not bettered.

Since the Nats' batting rampages in the South they have been asked to look at some of the best American League pitching and they have failed miserably. Danny MacFayden, Jackie Russel and Horace Lisenbee, of Boston, stopped them almost to a walk and Lefty Grove and George Earnshaw applied the brakes in the last two games with great effect.

It was the slugging ability that they promised that earned the Nats serious consideration in this year's campaign. As yet they have shown no sustained attack. But men like Myer, Manush, West, Cronin and Reynolds have too much native ability to be suppressed in a .201 average and the Nats' pennant bid will begin when they find their batting eyes.

TOM WHELAN UNDER KNIFE.

Tom Whelan, Catholic University's star half back and leading scorer among Capital college football players in 1931, is convalescing after removal of his tonsils, an infection of which caused his withdrawal from spring practice ten days ago. He is expected to rejoin the Cardinal squad this week for the remainder of the spring grid drills, directed by Coach Arthur Bergman.

TEAM NEEDS PLAYERS.

The Lincoln Seniors need a southpaw pitcher and a few outfielders. Players interested should call Manager Williams at North 6945.

Dixie Slugger Is Test for Schwartz

Fiemster Displaying Power in Punches in Gymnasium.

Strickler-Finazzo on Alexandria Card Tomorrow.

By JACK ESPEY.

THEY'VE assigned Billy Schwartz, hometown pride, nothing soft for his return to the boxing wars down Alexandria way tomorrow night. In matching him against Bill Fiemster, Southern light-heavy, the Day Nursery Athletic Association has placed in his path one of the toughest foes Billy ever has been called on to meet.

Fiemster recently bobbed up here with an empty pocketbook, but full of hope. The fact that he holds the light-heavy championship of the Carolinas failed to secure any matches in his own neck of the woods. Matchmaker Frankie Mann heard his story and told him to go into training. That was three weeks ago.

Now Fiemster is ready for battle, his 6-foot 175-pound body in the well-known pink, and judging from what the boys out at Mann's gym say, he'll give Schwartz many unpleasant moments tomorrow night.

Fiemster Showing Stiff Punch.

Fiemster has regained the form that enabled him to whip such fighters as Jack Denning, Buster Newberry and Al Massey down in the Carolinas. His left hand is sticking sparring partners in the face with painful regularity, while his right flies straight from the shoulder with tremendous force. In other words, he's punching as you like it.

Schwartz, on the other hand, is making an impression too. He's been working out with Natie Brown at the Jewish Community Center. Brown declares Billy has improved greatly in the past ten days; that the Alexandrian finally has straightened out his punches and is tossing a left hook and jab that really wreak havoc. Natie should be a pretty fair judge, having fought in major league rings for two years.

Schwartz-Strickler Bout in Making.

If Schwartz hurdles the Fiemster obstacle and Billy Strickler gets by Sam Finazzo in another of tomorrow night's scrambles, the fans yet may feast on that much-discussed battle for the light heavyweight championship of the District and Virginia. Strickler has been chasing Schwartz for an argument over the crown the past six weeks.

The forthcoming card has a strong local appeal. Besides the bouts mentioned, there will be a District welterweight championship scrap between Sammy Braunstein and Ray Bowen, and another bout of eight rounds between Nick Antonelli, Mohawk featherweight star, and Al Martin, of Baltimore. Marino Marini, left-handed lightweight, will swap clouts with Chuck Henderson, of Mississippi, in a four-round opener.

G. U. Prep Golf Team Wins and Ties Matches

Georgetown Prep School's golf team made its debut in the newly organized Prep School League yesterday, engaging St. John's and Friends in a double-header on the Garrett Park links. The home team defeated the Cadets, 6½-2½, and tied with Friends, 3-3. O'Leary, who tied Abel at 18 holes, was the only St. John's player to offer any resistance to the Georgetowners.

The play of Dodge, of Friends, in the nightcap, was the feature of the afternoon. He negotiated the tricky course in 69, defeating Simms, of Georgetown, by the wide margin of 7 and 5.

Nee (G) defeated Ortman, 6 and 4; Donohue (G) defeated Stanley, 5 and 4; best ball, Georgetown Prep, 6 and 5. Detweiler (G) defeated Kunz, 7 and 5; Abel (G) and O'Leary (S. J.) tied at 18 holes; best ball, Georgetown Prep, 3 and 2. Anderson (G) defeated Ferriter, 3 and 1; McNamee (S. J.) defeated Sewell, 2 and 1; best ball, tie.

Allen (G) defeated Lunn, 3 and 2; Dodge (P) defeated Simm, 7 and 5; best ball, Friends, 3 and 2. Zubrot (G) defeated Eakin, 4 and 3; Carey (G) and Turner tied at 18 holes; best ball, tie.

George, Westenberg Clash Tonight at Bolling Field

Former Champion of Bowserites Meets Coast Sensation; Pojello, Benkert, Martin, Strack, Winters on Card.

FAIR-HAIRED boys and stormy petrels of Paul Bowser's wrestling trust are to grapple at Bolling Field Armory tonight, when the Bolling Field Athletic Association stages its most pretentious show.

Virtually every trick of the rassling trade should eventuate when the curtain rings up at 8:30.

Leading off in interest is the finish go in which Ed ("Don") George, former heavyweight champion of the Bowserites, mixes with Marvin Westenberg, 21-year-old Pacific Coast flash.

George, one of the fastest and most picturesque matmen in the game, may encounter considerable difficulty in mastering young Westenberg, who impressed with a big league showing against Billy Bartush here recently.

Another wind-up finds Karl Pojello, Lithuanian crowd pleaser, returning against August Benkert, massive and powerful Belgian.

Much of the evening's color abounds in the scheduled 30-minute specials involving belligerent "Bool" Martin, last week's storm center, and Clivio Massimo; Charley Strack and Doctor Fred Meyers, and Danny Winters and Joe Vargo.

Tickets may be had at Goldie Ahearn's until 5 p. m. Ladies will be admitted at half price.

4 DAVIS CUP STARS DUE IN CITY

Allison, Shields, Van Ryn and Vines Will Practice Here.

FOUR principals who are to represent the United States in its Davis Cup tie tennis stand against Canada at the Chevy Chase Club next week are to report here for practice over the coming week-end, it was announced today.

Scheduled to show in the Davis competition on April 28, 29 and 30, Ellsworth Vines, Frank Shields, John Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison today were to play in the annual Mason-Dixxon tourney at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

Though defeated by Wilmer Allison in the North-South tournament at Greensboro, N. C., last week, Vines, defending national champion, promises to reach top form in the play starting today. In defeat last week Vines indicated a return to his old form, carrying Allison to five sets.

The public sale of tickets for Davis Cup play here starts Wednesday. Application blanks for reservations are available at Spalding's, the Chevy Chase Club and Junior League clubroom, Connecticut avenue and Q.

Georgetown to Honor "Doc" White at Dinner

Dr. G. Harris White, one of Georgetown's famous sons, has been honored by his alma mater with an invitation to present the Varsity G certificates at the annual Georgetown athletic banquet Wednesday night, in the Willard Hotel.

White, at present athletic director of the local high schools, was a stellar pitcher at Georgetown and in the major leagues early in the century. He lost but four of the 31 games he hurled for the Blue and Gray. While a member of the Chicago White Sox he established two all-time records, pitching five consecutive runless games and pitching 58 1-3 consecutive innings without issuing a pass. In 1906 he pitched 27 games and yielded only 33 runs, while in 1907 he walked but 40 batsmen in 43 games.

Greiner Is First Home In K. C. Country Run

That local runners will give visiting stars a battle for the honors in the forthcoming District A. A. U. 15-mile marathon championship, to be held next month, was evident from the times recorded in the 10-mile practice run staged yesterday. Yesterday's hike was over the Mount Vernon Boulevard, the same course over which the District, and later National championships will be decided.

Bill Greiner, K. of C., led the field home in the fast time of 1:00.34. H. L. Nahgonbe, Navy, was second, negotiating the distance in 1:02.28. Mike Lynch, veteran campaigner, finished third in 1:07.33. Jerry Looney, K. of C., was fourth in 1:11.12, and Jimmy Montague, unattached, was fifth in 1:12.24.

Four Argyle Golfers Tie in Medal Handicap

The results were as follows: First flight, Wilbur A. Taylor, 98, 22, 76; W. D. Wootten, 101, 25, 76; Theodore Walker, 106, 30, 76; W. H. Flannery, 96, 20, 76. Second flight, S. F. Sherwood, 94, 19, 75. Third flight, Thomas Mears, 102, 29, 73; Frank Morrell, 99, 26, 73; E. V. Carr, 99, 26, 73. Fourth flight, Nolan Gibson, 96, 25, 71; Thomas Willmett, 91, 20, 71; F. H. Flynn, 106, 35, 71. Fifth flight, C. W. Ray, 115, 35, 80.

Lanham-Bethesda Tilt Is Fought by Families

The Lanham-Bethesda baseball game played yesterday at Lanham, which the latter won by a score of 4-3, developed into a family affair. The three Rector brothers, Al, Ben and Ches, performed for the winners, and the three Best boys, Roy, Harry and Bill, in addition to Uncle Lenny, played for Bethesda. All played important roles in the fray. Herb Brickerd, who twirled for Lanham, held his opponents to 5 hits and fanned 12. Al Trammell starred at bat for the same team, getting a double and two singles in four trips to the plate.

RANGERS STOP HAWKS.

"Ducky" James held the Hawk midgets to four hits as the Rangers triumphed by a score of 16 to 4 in a one-sided game played on the Monument Grounds yesterday.

BROWNS WIN, 1-0, FROM TIGERS

Cop Despite Sorrell Granting Them But Three Safeties.

DETROIT, April 17 (A.P.).—Vic Sorrell allowed the St. Louis Browns only three hits and a walk today, but the Browns put together a pass, a sacrifice and a single to score a run and defeat the Tigers, 1-0.

The run came in the eighth when Goslin walked, advanced on Ferrell's sacrifice and scored on Kress' single to right.

Detroit, held to five hits by Dick Coffman, had only two scoring chances.

Vines' Slump Blow to U.S. Net Hopes

Champion's Decline Hurts Chances of Regaining Cup.

Allison Defeat Seen Gloomily; Team to Play in Va.

By STUART CAMERON.

NEW YORK, April 17 (U.P.).—United States hopes of bringing the Davis Cup back to the land of its donor were at a low ebb today due to the loss of form of Ellsworth Vines, of Pasadena, Calif., America's great tennis hope.

Vines' recent play has been several notches below that which gained him the 1931 United States championship. His technique seems to have fallen apart; even his blistering service, which was largely responsible for his meteoric success last year slipping out of control.

His court covering ability and his powerful and exact forehand drive, which, added to that devastating service caused Vines to be hailed as a second Bill Tilden, are, for the time being, at least, lost parts of his repertoire.

Vines' Improvement Temporary.

The youthful Californian's play was anything but good during the winter on the Coast. It seemed to pick up a bit in tournaments through the Southern belt, and then a slump set in. He was beaten by Wilmer Allison, veteran Texas Davis Cup campaigner, in New Orleans a week ago. Yesterday Allison defeated him again, this time in the finals of the North and South championship at Pinehurst, N. C.

These results can not be laid to a sudden improvement of form on the part of Allison—the Texan merely played his game; Vines was off his.

Vines, of course, was seeking revenge. He needed victory not only to revive a waning prestige, but to restore confidence in himself. His start against Allison was brave enough. He won the first set. Then, after trailing at 1 to 4 in the fourth set he captured six of the next seven games to win the set and draw up even with Allison. Again Vines lost his cunning, dropping the deciding game at 6 to 1.

Net Stars Converging For Va. Tourney.

The tennis vanguard moves on to White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., this week for competition in the annual Mason and Dixon championship. This will be the last tournament play for Davis cuppers before going to the Chevy Chaze Club, Washington, where they will engage in final practices for the North American Zone Davis Cup tie with the Canadian team.

Despite Vines' current fall from form it's likely that the United States cup committee will stand upon its original line-up for the Canadian tie. This would be for Vines and Frank Shields to play the singles, and John Van Ryn and George Martin Lott the one doubles match. Allison some time ago was named as a member of the squad so he could be called on for play against Canada, if it was decided to drop Vines.

Nats' Big Guns Fail to Solve Speed of Athletic Ace.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

MORE than 22,000 fans, a crowd larger than that of opening day, turned out at Griffith Stadium yesterday to see the Nationals and Mackmen in their first 1932 meeting here. As far as the game was concerned, the home team furnished little competition, being routed, 11 to 3, but the affair had quite an educational value.

It showed conclusively that it is not the number of hits that count, but how and when they are made, while it also showed just why George Earnshaw is a great pitcher—his ability to tighten up in the pinches.

One looking at the score could hardly believe that the Mackmen were credited with but two more hits than were the Nationals and that their total-base record barely topped that of the residents, 22-19, while it probably sounds like a fairy tale to mention that, when the Nats scored their run in the fifth to make the count 9-2 against them, the score-book showed that they had cracked out eight safeties to only seven credited to the visitors.

Earnshaw Halts Rallies.

The answer, of course, was furnished by the respective moundmen.

Earnshaw granted two hits and a run in the first round, but was able to put on the brakes. In the second, Bluege and Spencer, first two up, singled, but big George settled down and held Marberry to an infield tap and fanned both Myer and Manush.

Fans thought the Nats had Earnshaw on the run in the fifth when, after he had fanned the first two to face him, Cronin doubled and Reynolds tripled, but Judge was held to a fly to center. Bluege opened the sixth with a single and scored on Berg's triple, but the Macks' star right-hander tightened up again and prevented further damage, while Myer's three-bagger, which opened the ninth, was just as useless to the Washington cause.

Manush Fanned Four Times.

Despite the fact that Earnshaw yielded an average of more than a hit an inning, he pitched a truly great game, rising to great heights practically every time he was called

IN THE WAKE OF THE GAME

MANAGER WALTER JOHNSON and his Nationals hop a train for Philadelphia this morning, where they beard the White Elephants in their lair this afternoon and tomorrow. Carl Fischer, the young southpaw, will make his debut as a starter in today's game and probably will find another left-hander, George (Rube) Walberg, opposing him. It probably will be Monte Weaver and Roy Mahaffey doing the twirling in tomorrow's fracas.

With the Mackmen already two up on the Nats, by virtue of victories Saturday and yesterday, it is up to the home gang to snare both of these games, a man-sized job, especially in the A's bandbox park, where each Mackman has a particular spot at which he always aims for homers.

The Nationals are not filling Friday's open date with an exhibition game, but will spend the day practicing. On July 25, however, while en route from Washington to St. Louis, Manager Johnson and his charges stop off at Cincinnati for a game with the Reds.

Victor McLaglen, the movie actor was a visitor at yesterday's game. He simply was passing through Washington and decided to stop off and see the rivals play.

Connie Mack is glad that Baseball Commissioner Landis called off the deal sending Joe Boley to the Indians. Dib Williams, of whom much was expected this season, has failed to round to his 1931 form and has been benched, with the veteran shortstop back in the saddle again.

Bishop made a great try for Reynolds' hot grasser in the first throwing himself at the ball and managing to knock it down. It skidded through his hands, however, to short center and the blow went for a double.

Umpire Hildebrand temporarily stopped the game in the second because a fan in the center field stands was trying to blind the batters with a sun glass. No action was needed, for the guilty party took the hint and put his looking-glass away.

West raced back almost to the stands in center for Earnshaw's long fly opening the alien third.

Reynolds sent Haas back to the stands in center for a long looper in the home third.

When West fanned opening the Nats' third round he was Earnshaw's fifth strike-out victim and the third in a row, for Myer and Manush had gone down swingnig at third strikes for the last two outs of the previous session.

The wind carried Earnshaw's drive opening the fourth from direct to right center. It went as a triple Earnshaw fanned another trio in a row in the fourth and fifth. Myer ending round 4 and Manush, for the third time and West for the second striking out opening the fifth.

West tore back almost to the flag pole to make a great overhead grab of Simmons' looper opening the seventh.

Myer went over toward first to make a nice stop and peg of Cramer's bounder ending the seventh. "Rags" Ragland made his major league debut opening this session and it was the first in which none of the A's saw base life.

Ragland made a nice one-handed stop of Earnshaw's grasser in the eighth and whipped the ball to third to trap Dykes, who had beaten out a bunt and advanced on an out.

Ragland walked Haas on four successive balls with two dead in the eighth, filling the bases.

Simmons had his first chance afield in the eighth when he gathered in Bluege's liner. He did not get a hit until the ninth. Then he greeted Weaver with a liner single to right.

LIBERTY LIMITED LOOMS AS CHIEF DERBY HOPE OF WEST

Three D. Star Now Fourth Choice

Winter Book Odds of 100-1 Have Dropped to 8-1.

Worked Fast Mile Under Wraps Yesterday at Downs.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 17 (A.P.).—Chances of the Far West providing the winner of the 1932 Kentucky Derby have been increasing daily as Liberty Limited improves in training at Churchill Downs. "The Limited" is considered the most advanced of any of the Derby eligibles engaging in workouts here.

Nominated by the Three D's Stock Farm, of Texas, owned by W. T. Waggoner & Sons, Liberty Limited was quoted at 100 to 1 in the winter books when they opened in February. At last reports he had been backed down to 8 to 1, rating him fourth among the 115 eligibles in the eyes of the bookies.

Top Flight, C. V. Whitney's crack filly, has retained her winter book favoritism throughout, with Tick On and Burning Blaze second and third choices. The precipitate drop in the odds on Liberty Limited have placed him in the select category of "the horses to beat."

Liberty Limited started six times as a 2-year-old, won only once, was second twice, third twice and among the also rans once. His total earnings as a juvenile were $6,400, not an impressive figure when compared to Top Flight's record of $219,000.

But the one race "The Limited" won was accompanied by the thunderous cheers which greet a winner on Derby Day. He won a purse race for juveniles on Derby Day last year, and has had a taste of the excitement attendant on the blue ribbon event of American racing.

JOE AND ASBESTOS —By Ken Kling

Asbestos cashed his third straight winner Saturday on Hygro. Fortune's Favorite, the horse he sent out at Tanforan Friday, won, paying $7.50 for $3, or $1.50 to $1. The bank roll is now $11.90.

AT THE POST
with Bill Bennings

HAVRE DE GRACE RACE TRACK.

DEAR AL:

I expect to see Kate Smith, Primo Carnera, Tiny Roebuck or the Smith Brothers riding Equipoise before the season is over. The way the Big Horse carried that 128 pounds Saturday leads me to believe the Whitney coin chaser could have the Statue of Liberty up and still win races. Take your hat off (if you still have one) to Freddie Hopkins.

There's no Equipoise entered today. I'll have to do my own picking. If you feel you can afford it, get down on these.

BILL.

FIRST RACE—ARGOSIE, a daughter of Man o' War, seems to be in a spot to graduate from the maiden ranks. Showed flashes of speed at Belmont last fall and has filled out during the winter. Has a good post position and likes a fast track. CHLOEDAIR has had a lot of experience. Ran an even race at Bowie and should be second among these. BOARDWALKER ran a good race behind Knights Cap and is a factor.

SECOND RACE—MISS BRILLIANT lacks some of the class of her rivals here, but has proven consistent as 2-year-olds come. Won two races at New Orleans and stepped along fast behind Acautaw at Bowie. LUCILLE, the logical favorite, outclassed opposition in Havana and Florida and should take the place money. THREE DAGGERS comes to the races with the C. V. Whitney stamp.

THIRD RACE—BRAVE AND BOLD appears to be in the spot to win that race he missed at Bowie. Placed twice in three starts and the class of those races is absent here. THE CRANE turned in a fine effort at Laurel last fall and ran an even race against older and better opposition at Bowie. May make it hot for the top one if ready. KNIGHTS CAP did all that was asked the first time.

FOURTH RACE—HAPPY WARRIOR can win this race if he can run back to that form he showed at this track last fall. Has worked well and I believe a good price will be hung up.

LADFIELD ran a head behind Jolly Pilot and Open Hearth at Bowie in the mud and will be dangerous here. BLAZE WHITE stayed with a fast pace the last time out, which indicates he is ripe for a sprint.

FIFTH RACE—BOUNDLESS DEEP exhibited a world of speed in that race with Royal Ruffin at Bowie. I expect Mrs. John Hay Whitney to take this purse providing she selects the right rider. True, that was a sloppy track, but BOUNDLESS DEEP broke fast and a like start today will put the son of Negofol in the battle for the purse when the stretch is reached. MORSEL was a factor in races of this kind last year but may need a conditioner. SPINACH went back last season, but may be ready to get third here.

SIXTH RACE — BUBOLA is my choice. I know Stone Martin and Finnic beat her the last time, but I believe that race gave the signal that the daughter of Bubbling Over is due for some more breaks. That finish was a beaut. I expect a quicker break today. STONE MARTIN for second and CHICSU for third.

SEVENTH RACE—DADDY NELSON is ready or I miss my guess and take a dent in the bank roll. This gelding figured prominently hereabouts last year and his last behind era stamps him as due for a winning effort. Ate up ground in the stretch and may be up there to take it all today. NEALON KAY for second with KEITH third.

Hecht Pitchers Hold Bernizer Nine Hitless

The first no-hit, no-run game of the current season was recorded yesterday when Paul Schanol and Walter Hurley pitched the Hecht Co. nine to a 3-to-1 victory over the Bernizer Construction Co., in a well-played game on the Monument lot.

The fray went only seven innings because of darkness. Farley, who twirled for Bernizer, also displayed good form, holding his opponents to a trio of bingles.

2,000 Bowlers Await Start Tonight of D. C. Title Event

KEYED to a high pitch of excitement, more than 2,000 bowlers await the zero hour which will send them off in search of 1932 Washington City Duckpin Association titles tonight at Convention Hall. Not since Arville Ebersole, secretary of the association, assumed control of the tournament seven years ago has the event looked so promising. No less than 414 teams, representing the ultimate in local bowling talent, will compete.

The fanfare and color, usually attendant to opening night, will be missing tonight, but before half the bowlers have had their fling at the championships more color and gaiety than any tournament has ever witnessed will be seen. The Almas Temple and Odd Fellows bands, in full regalia, are scheduled to appear the nights the members from these organizations roll. "Pop" Pendergast, potentate of Almas Temple, will also be on hand, accompanied by his complete divan that evening.

None the less prepared for the big party is Charley Bell, hustling manager of the Hall. The place is bedecked in a multitude of flags and bunting. The alleys have been polished until they shine like a grinning pickaninny, and the Hall's entire staff, from Lieut. Eddie Espey down to the lowliest pinboy, is ready for the crowd.

Tonight's schedule calls for singles at 7:15 o'clock, teams at 8 o'clock and doubles at 10

BANDMASTERS PAY TRIBUTE TO SOUSA; CONVENTION ENDED

Three Service Bands Join in Honoring Memory of March King.

FIVE NUMBERS PLAYED INCLUDE 4 HE COMPOSED

Secretary Doak Presents Association's Medal to Goldman.

The three service bands and the American Bandmasters Association last night paid tribute to the memory of John Philip Sousa, March King, in a varied program of music at Constitution Hall under auspices of the District of Columbia Chapter of the American Red Cross, closing the convention.

Five numbers "In Memory of John Philip Sousa" were the high lights of the program. Four of Sousa's most popular compositions—the "United States Field Artillery March," conducted by Walter M. Smith, bandmaster, Boston; "The Washington Post March," conducted by Frank Simon, bandmaster, Middletown, Ohio; "El Capitan March," conducted by Herbert L. Clarke, bandmaster, Long Beach, Calif., and "The Stars and Stripes Forever," conducted by Arthur Pryor—met with enthusiastic and well-deserved applause.

Victor J. Grabel, bandmaster of the Chicago Concert Band, conducted his own arrangement of Chopin's "Funeral March," played by the Marine Band. This selection, rendered with feeling, and conducted by Sousa's old friend Grabel, was a fitting tribute to America's greatest bandmaster.

Several New Selections.

With one exception, an arrangement of Ravel's "Bolero," conducted by Lieut. Charles Benter with his United States Navy Band, the other compositions were new, written for the occasion and many were conducted by the composers themselves, members of the Association of Bandmasters. An overture, "Spiritual Rivers," composed by George C. Gault with Capt. William J. Stannard and his United States Army Band, was an outstanding feature of the program. "Sabbath Evening in Camp," a composition of Capt. R. B. Hayward, played by the massed bands and conducted by the composer, the bandmaster of the Toronto Concert Band, was one of the most picturesque numbers. Opening with the ringing of a church bell intermingled with horns and winds suggestive of organ music, the piece ended with the sunset gun and taps.

Other numbers on the program were a fantasie, "Midshipmen," conducted by the composer, Peter Buys; "A Chinese Festival," by Maurice Arnold, conducted by Austin A. Harding, director of bands, University of Illinois; "Concert Overture in F. Minor," conducted by the composer, Capt. Charles O'Neill, bandmaster, The Citadel, Quebec; Tone Poem—"The Wind in the Leafless Maple," conducted by the composer, Lieut. J. J. Gagnier, bandmaster, Grenadier Guards Band, Montreal; "Huntingtower Ballad," by Ottorino Respighi and conducted by Capt. Taylor Branson; "Skyward," conducted by the composer, Nathaniel Shilkret, and grand march, "University," conducted by the composer, Edwin Franko Goldman, president of the association.

Doak Presents Medal.

Secretary of Labor, William N. Doak, introduced by Isaac Gans, presented the American Bandmasters Association medal to Mr. Goldman in token of appreciation for his work in organizing bandmasters for "better bands and better band music." In response Mr. Goldman paid a glowing tribute to the three service bands and their bandmasters, their fine spirit of cooperation and the generous gift of their time.

Earlier in the day members of the association visited Sousa's grave in Congressional Cemetery and paid a lasting tribute to the greatest of American bandmasters.

VIETH INQUEST SET TODAY IN MARLBORO

Man Who Died in Burning Car to Be Buried Tomorrow in Fort Lincoln.

An inquest into the death of Kenneth Vieth, of 2855 Monroe street northeast, whose charred body was found in a blazing automobile early yesterday, off the Crain highway, about two miles above Marlboro, will be held at 7:30 p. m. today at Marlboro. Vieth, according to relatives, was returning to Washington from Kenwood Beach, when the accident occurred.

Burned beyond recognition, he was identified by the license tags of the car and a ring he wore. The ring was the only article worn by him which could be identified. Relatives said he had about $500 in money and notes at the time. He was a member of the real estate firm of Woodward and Vieth.

The burning automobile was found in an embankment after it had fallen 30 feet off the road. The fire department extinguished the flames, but the blazing fire frustated any attempt at rescue.

Mr. Vieth, who was a Mason, will be buried with Masonic rites at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Francis Vieth, and two children, William Henry, 4, and Barbara Ann, 2.

Old Ironsides Is Back After Southern Trip

One of the most famous vessels afloat—the frigate Constitution—better known as "Old Ironsides"—docked at the Washington Navy Yard late Saturday to take part in the George Washington Bicentennial Celebration. Coming from St. Petersburg, Fla., in tow of the mine sweeper, U. S. S. Grebe, the historic ship dropped anchor at the shore of the Capital for the third time since 1812.

Completing her cruise of Southern waters, the Constitution made the long voyage to Washington without mishap. Some time will be needed for a general clean-up and minor repairs, but it is expected that tomorrow will see the vessel open to visitors. From 10 o'clock each morning until 5 o'clock in the evening, spectators will be permitted to view the many interesting objects aboard the old craft.

Until May 11 the frigate will remain in its berth at the Navy Yard, then a brief visit to Alexandria, Va., and she will again return here to stay until the conclusion of the Bicentennial celebration in November. A tour of West Coast ports will follow her Washington visit.

In the early spring of 1812 the vessel first docked here. After a number of repairs had been made, she docked off Alexandria, and it was while there that war with Great Britain was declared. Her last visit was made from November 6 to 18 last year.

Irish Rule Topic Of Meeting Here

Association for Recognition of Republic Discusses De Valera's Plans.

Determination of the De Valera government in Ireland "to proceed relentlessly with the abolition of the oath to the king and renunciation of the annuities" was expressed in a letter from Sean O'Kelly, minister of affairs in the new cabinet, read last night by Charles Edward Russell, president of the Kevin Barry Council of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, at a meeting of the council at Musicians Hall.

John T. Finerty, attorney, presented evidence purporting to show that an agreement had been reached between the Cosgrave government of 1921 and the British government eliminating the need of further payment of annuities, and that this agreement had been removed from the records.

Charges that news from India is being suppressed were made by Mr. Russell. He based his assertions on a bulletin of the American League for India's Freedom which cited what was claimed to be some of the "real" news from India. The league's bulletin reported that Mohammedans in Bengal are showing sympathy with the Hindus because of "persecution" by the British, and that the British officials in Bengal are becoming uneasy over threatened coalescence between the two.

Y. M. C. A. HONORS COOPER'S MEMORY

Four Speakers Eulogize Man Who Was Secretary for 21 Years.

Tributes to the memory of William Knowles Cooper, for 21 years general secretary of the Washington Young Men's Christian Association, who died last January, were paid by four men familiar with various phases of his life, at a memorial service yesterday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. building.

Dr. George Otis Smith, president of the local Y. M. C. A. from 1909 to 1922, told of Mr. Cooper's early work when he first came to Washington in 1908.

Mr. Smith showed that the late general secretary's aims were not confined solely to making a success of his work in Washington, but that "he had a wide vision of world service" and aspired to an international growth of good work through the medium of the Y. M. C. A.

Influence of Individuals.

Mr. Cooper's influence on individual lives was told by Hugh A. Thrift, president of the Y. M. C. A. from 1922 to 1928. Mr. Thrift cited a number of instances in which Mr. Cooper had lifted the hopes of men and women out of the slough of despondency through the medium of his own strength-giving, cheerful personality.

The contagious personality of Mr Cooper was described by Huston Thompson, who was president of the Y. M. C. A. during the latter portion of Mr. Cooper's life, from 1928 to 1931. Speaking of Mr. Cooper's love of fun, Mr. Thompson said: "He was perfectly willing to play the clown if he thought it would mean bringing joy and happiness to others."

Referring to Mr. Cooper's aspirations and his far-reaching vision, Mr. Thompson said: "He had possibilities of making a great ambassador, or a great leader in the business world."

National Building.

John E. Manley, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., at Pittsburgh, Pa., said that one of Mr. Cooper's highest ambitions was to establish a National Y. M. C. A. building in Washington as a monument to the Y. M. C. A. This objective, he predicted, will be carried out through cooperation of people in Washington and Y. M. C. A. workers throughout the country.

Dr. Arthur C. Christie, now president of the Y. M. C. A., presided. Fred East sang two solos, "Come Unto Me" and "Friend o' Mine." The Rev. C. T. Warner, rector of St. Alban's Episcopal Church, offered an opening prayer and gave the benediction.

The service was opened with the playing of "Largo" by Handel, and concluded with the singing of the Hallelujah chorus from "The Messiah" by the same composer. P. M. Etchison was the accompanist.

Huguenot Society Attends Two Cathedral Services

Carying out the tradition of Canterbury Cathedral in England, where Huguenots have worshiped since the sixteenth century, Washington Cathedral was the scene Sunday for two Washington Bicentennial commemorative services for the members of the Huguenot Society of America from a half dozen Eastern and Southern States.

A Holy Communion service was held in the chapel of St. Joseph of Arimathea in the morning, being followed by another observance in the Bethlehem Chapel in the early afternoon at which the Right Rev. Frank DuMoulin, of Louise Valley, N. Y., retired Episcopal Bishop Coadjutor of Ohio, was the preacher. Bishop DuMoulin declared that the Huguenot revolution was one of the greatest spiritual movements in history and "caused a great step in the progress of civilization through the impetus that it gave to the use of the printing press." He said that the Huguenots, by having Bibles printed in the language of various nations, created the first wide use of the printing press.

At the 11 a. m. celebration of the Holy Communion in the Bethlehem Chapel, the Right Rev. John T. Dallas, Bishop of New Hampshire, who is especially known for his work among young people, was the preacher.

CATHOLIC SPEAKER HITS U. S. CONTROL OF SCHOOL SYSTEM

Home Should Have Voice in Education, Declares Dr. Johnson.

USURPING OF RIGHT HELD GRAVE PERIL TO NATION

Importance of Institution Is Termed Exaggerated in Radio Address.

Declaring that "the home should control the school and not the school the home," Dr. George Johnson, Ph. D., national director of education for the National Catholic Welfare Conference, warned that placing the schools under Government control "would be the beginning of the end of American liberty," in an address yesterday afternoon at the Church of the Immaculate Conception on the Washington Catholic radio hour.

"The primary rights of parents in the education of their children must be vindicated if we are not to drift into Communism or perhaps Fascism," he said. A division between parents and the political agency that administers the Nation's schools will increase the chances of establishment of the nationalization of the child. Communism's most cherished institution, he pointed out.

Dr. Johnson, one of the country's best informed authorities on education, branded as "social heresy" the idea that the school is primarily a concern of the state and that the interest of parents in education is only a secondary consideration.

Exaggerated Importance.

"Education," he said, "is coming to be regarded exclusively as a civic process, a Government monopoly. The assumption is that children belong to the state and that the state alone is competent to determine the methods by which they are to be prepared for the responsibilities of adult living.

"The school itself has assumed an exaggerated importance in our minds, as though it were the sole educational agency, instead of one among many," he charged.

Dr. Johnson decried the tendency "to extend the Government monopoly on education to the child's health and morals."

School Control Is Topic.

"What is needed more than anything else at the present time," he asserted, "is a clear-cut definition of the function of the school in society. We need to realize that it is but one among many educational agencies, and that while it is important, it is by no means the most important. Its function is to supplement, not to displace the home."

Dr. Johnson's subject was "Who Shall Control the Schools?" The Rev. Francis J. Hurney, pastor of the church and director of the broadcasts, presided at the service. The Rev. Stanley Czyz was celebrant at solemn benediction. The blessing of the sick and the solemn Lourdes procession took place at the Grotto of Our Lady of Lourdes in the church.

Miss Florence Yocum, soprano, and Mr. Frederick Nolan, barytone, were guest artists under the direction of Harry Wheaton Howard, who was accompanied by Miss Ann Arlen, violinist. The Boys Sanctuary Choir sang under the direction of the Rev. Brother Lewis.

WILL TO GIVE HELD BETTER THAN POWER

"An Ancient Bread Line," Is Topic at Congregational Church.

"It is a tragedy in the world when the people who have the food to give lack the compassion for those who need it," said Dr. Allen A. Stockdale, preaching yesterday morning at the First Congregational Church.

Dr. Stockdale's sermon was based on the sixteenth verse of the fourteenth chapter of the Book of Matthew, "But Jesus said unto them, they have no need to go away, give them to eat." His subject was "An Ancient Bread Line."

"It is come to pass what Jesus said: 'Greater works would our age do than He could in His,' Jesus caused the thousands to be fed but Christianity provides food for the millions," Dr. Stockdale went on.

"Jesus was interested in hungry folks and wanted them to be fed. He saw a bread line in the days He lived on earth and it touched His heart. The disciples wanted to send them away, even though they were hungry. Jesus did not want to send them away hungry, either spiritually or physically. Compassion for the sick and hungry will always be a mark of genuine Christian character.

"The miracle of our age is not the multiplication of loaves and fishes, but the collection and distribution of them. Our trouble is not the lack of food, but the getting of food to those who need it. Starvation in a land of water and luxury will always be displeasing to a loving, Heavenly Father. God provides, but man corners. Feeding the five thousand in the day of Jesus was an easy task with the influence of the Master causing all to share in the joy and practice of neighborliness.

"A greedy poor man who would take advantage of altruistic love is just as displeasing to God as a selfish rich man who forgets there are hungry people in the world," Dr. Stockdale continued.

"Our age needs the miracle of intelligent altruism and the dynamic of divine idealism more than a startling magic mass production.

"Food that comes without work or compensating effort is detrimental to character and happiness. Food must be provided that bodies do not starve, but work must be provided that characters do not disintegrate while they eat.

"If we could discover how all could get rich without work, we would at the same time know that character and society would be doomed to destruction. It is quite as vital that the five thousand should work as that they should eat," Dr. Stockdale said.

"If our age can discover how all can work, we will know at the same time that all will eat. But until all can work, the miracle of altruism must provide that all may be able to eat.

"As the presence of Jesus solved the hunger problem of the five thousand, so the spirit of Christ is essential to solving the food problems of our day," Dr. Stockdale concluded.

EVANGELIST TELLS OF HOLY LAND TOUR

Dressed in Native Costume, Miss Carmichael Speaks on "Jacob's Well."

Describing a recent tour of the Holy Land and Egypt, Evangelist Adele Carmichael lectured last night at the Masonic Temple Auditorium.

Miss Carmichael spoke on "Jacob's Well." With a replica of the historical well in the background, the platform had the setting of the sacred spot in Palestine where Christ sat and engaged the sinful Samaritan in conversation. The evangelist was dressed in a native costume and carried a water jar on her shoulder.

She told of many scenes and incidents occurring in the land made sacred by the Lord. The speaker described getting lost on the first night of her arrival in Jerusalem and groping her way along the unlighted and narrow streets of the old city proper, the portion which now lies inside the wall.

"Inside the walls one finds conditions unaffected by modern civilization and its inventions," Miss Carmichael said. From the Dead Sea she led her audience to Nazareth and the Sea of Galilee. Coming upon the sea in the late evening, just as the evening breezes were stirring, she could hear the murmuring as the wind lashed the water about the rocky shores, she said.

Nightfall overtook the traveler before she reached Nazareth from the Sea of Galilee. She said that it was a dangerous trip along the dusty roads and through the gypsy camps.

"This caused no little fear to me," said the speaker, "as I was not accustomed to this kind of treatment. And as if this was not enough, a mob closed in upon us and accused us of running over a man and leaving him in the road to die. We found our talking ability stood us at good hand here and persuaded the mob that it was not really us but some one else that had done such a wicked deed and we were told to drive on."

Gasoline Price Is Boosted One-Half Cent in District

Washington motorists, who drive into their favorite filling stations and ask for one of the various brands of gasoline, today will find that in each instance the price has been boosted one-half cent per gallon.

The new prices, which for some time have been anticipated by local dealers, went into effect at 1 minute past midnight. It applied to both straight and "high test" gasolines.

W. B. Yowell, of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, told The Post last night that he was unable to divulge reasons for the increase. The order to raise prices, he said, came from the main office in New York. Other dealers throughout the city followed suit.

For some time gasoline prices in all sections of the country have gradually been rising. The half-cent increase is general throughout this vicinity.

CIVILIZATION NEEDS RELIGIOUS REVIVAL, DR. PORTER HOLDS

Every Other Expedient Fails, First Baptist Congregation Is Told.

DESCRIBES HISTORICAL EFFECT IN PAST CRISES

Preacher Affirms Lord Is Still Waiting to Be Gracious to Mankind.

"If civilization is to be rescued, another revival of religion is absolutely necessary," declared Dr. Samuel Judson Porter, preaching yesterday morning at the First Baptist Church on "A Prayer for Renewal."

Dr. Porter's text was taken from the twenty-first verse of the fifth chapter of the Book of Jeremiah, "Turn thou us unto Thee, O Lord, and we shall be turned; renew our days as of old." Dr. Porter said in part:

"Ours is a weary world. We have tried almost every expedient only to find ourselves baffled, confused, well-nigh defeated. Is it not time for us to seek anew the standard of righteousness and try afresh to understand and appreciate the spiritual values?

Return to Fervent Prayer.

"The renewal that we need involves a return to fervent prayer, to faithful and earnest worship of God, to seeking His face and favor in the sanctuary, and to the earnest and effectual preaching of the remission of sins through Jesus Christ, the Son of God.

"The revival need not be patterned after those of other days; what counts is that it shall be genuine, the result of prayer and a desire to follow righteousness, to do justice, and to walk humbly with God. The price to be paid for such a revival is indicated in the resolve of Zinzendorf: 'I will, as far as I can, help to bring about this renewal, though I have to sacrifice my earthly possessions, my honors, and my life.'

"Verily the day of revivals is not past, ought not to be past. The Holy Spirit is still waiting to fill believers with power from on high. Former President Calvin Coolidge never said a truer thing than when he gave as his deliberate conviction that, 'what this country needs is a revival of religion.'

Promise of Strength.

"The Lord is waiting to be gracious, and 'they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength' is the promise. What happened two centuries ago, as a result of 'waiting on the Lord,' may take place again today. The times are very much as they were then. Dead orthodoxy in that day had degenerated into rationalism, worldliness, vice, crime and atheism.

"Then came the great revival and, as the historian Green tells us, saved England from plunging over the precipice into the unspeakable horrors of the French revolution.

"Out of such resolve and consecration, as is quoted in the words of Jeremiah in the text, sprang the revival, which, during the middle of the eighteenth century swept through Europe and America with transforming power. One of the results of this awakening was the conversion of John Wesley in a meeting held for prayer in a little room. Lecky, the historian, says, 'What happened in that little room was of more importance to England than all the victories of Pitt by land or sea.'"
